Senate Race Is Keyed to Scandals in Pennsylvania

Both Parties Seek To Exploit Current Crime Probes for Political Gains

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22. Crime may not pay, but Democrats in this normally Republican city think gumshoeing does.

They are banking heavily on a rash of investigations here and in Republican Luzerne County to turn up enough sensations to save the Senate seat of Administration Whip Francis J. Myers.

On the theory that two can play at cops and robbers, Governor James H. Duff, Myers' opponent for the Senate, has launched his own State investigation of city work scandals in Democratic territory, Pittsburgh.

With Duff's Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti ailing, Democrats to date have proved the best dirt-diggers. Besides, a Pittsburgh newspaper strike, closing down publications in that area, has left the local gentry largely uninformed about Margiotti's inquiry.

Not conceding any politics in their own move, of course, the Republicans hope to whittle down Democratic margins in Pittsburgh by crime revelations there, to offset the likely Democratic edge in no-longer-crime-tolerant Philadelphia.

If Democrats capture both city strongholds, Republicans say they still will roll in enough votes from the rest of the State to comfortably elect Jim Duff to the Senate, though it could be a closer squeak for his governorship running mate, John S. Fine.

Democrats, whose exposure of municipal corruption in Philadelphia paid off to the tune of a 112,000 majority for four minor city "row" offices last year, insist they $250,000 Pain?

Attic Bonds Pose Puzzle For Virginia

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—Nothing would have happened if the little old lady in southwest Virginia had stayed out of her attic.

But now the Governor is involved, the State Treasurer is involved, the fourteenth amendment is involved and Virginia's reputation of always paying her debts is involved.

And 76-year-old Mrs. Bonny Walker, of Vinton, is involved happily in what she considers a noble crusade.

Briefly, Mrs. Walker has produced two $1000 bonds, issued by the Commonwealth of Virginia more than 75 years ago.

Mrs. Walker has figured it up, and she wants the State to redeem them, please, for the $250,000 she figures they're worth — calculated at 6 percent compound interest.

The bonds are crumbling apart, but Mrs. Walker says they were issued in 1861. The date isn't very legible—the date might be 1864.

If the bonds were issued in 1864, they aren't worth the paper they're printed on—the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution says Southern States may not make good any obligations incurred to finance the Civil War. But maybe they were issued in 1861, before Virginia seceded.

Says Mrs. Walker in a letter to Governor John S. Battle:

"All I know is that the bonds say: 'Be it known that there is due from the Commonwealth of Virginia unto the bearer the sum of $1000, redeemable after January 1, 1899, with interest at six percent per annum.

"Now, it's after 1899, and I'm the bearer."

36 Alexandria Cars Damaged By Marauders

Windows, Headlights Smashed in 2-Night Rampage by Gangs

Alexandria police last night were looking for a band of youths who in two nights of rampaging have damaged at least 36 automobiles in the Rosemont area of Alexandria.

Early Sunday morning the front windows of 24 cars belonging to residents in the area were smashed in on the driver's side, police said, although no attempt was made to take anything from the cars or to drive them away.

Friday night "at least a dozen" automobile owners in the same area reported broken headlights and windows, and one home owner told of a group of teen-agers who drove an automobile onto her lawn and damaged her shrubbery and fence.

H. L. Mencken 'Much Improved,' Recovery in Sight

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22 (AP).—A hospital bulletin indicated today that death has backed away from sharp-tongued H. L. Mencken.

Stricken by a heart attack October 12, the 70-year-old critic, author and newspaperman had been expected to die at any moment.

This afternoon a Johns Hopkins Hospital spokesman said Mencken's condition still was critical but he was 'much improved, alert and expected to be in the hospital for several weeks."

Red China Bid Before U.N. Today

Russia Supports Britain in Split With U. S. on What Qualifies Nation

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Oct. 22 (U.P.).—The crucial issue of whether representatives of Communist China will replace delegates of Nationalist China in the United Nations will come before the U. N.'s special political committee Monday.

The United States and Britain, solid allies in the postwar quarrel between eastern and western camps, split on the issue last Saturday and Russia quickly came to Britain's support.

No immediate decision was expected. Several more speakers, including Bolivia, India, the Netherlands, Costa Rica and the Union of South Africa, were scheduled to participate in Monday's debate.

The committee must vote on a British resolution and a Cuban resolution, relating to recognition of nations. The General Assembly, under which the special political committee operates, would finally decide on the question.

The British resolution, vehemently opposed by the United States, prescribes steps for the recognition of a country and would open the door for Communist China.

Highlight of the week in U.N. will be an address by President Truman to a special Assembly meeting at Flushing Tuesday.

He is expected to emphasize America's support for the world body's efforts towards a lasting peace based on justice and democracy.

Ernest A. Gross, United States representative on the committee, opposed the resolution Saturday on grounds that the government accepted by the United Nations must demonstrate a willingness and ability to comply with the United Nations charter.

While the special political committee grapples with this problem, the main political committee will begin a debate on the Soviet "peace" proposals for outlawing atomic weapons, denouncing as an aggressor the first nation to use atomic weapons, reducing armed forces of all nations by one third, and concluding a five-power pact for "strengthening peace."

The third major U. N. meeting Monday will be a private conference of the Big Five powers on the Security Council, which will seek the nomination of a candidate as U.N. secretary general to succeed Trygve Lie on termination of his five years of service in the post next February 2.

Chase Becomes Rout As South Koreans Head for Border In Three Columns

BULLETIN

TOKYO, (Monday) Oct. 23 (U.P.).—American airmen reported today that South Korean troops have passed Huichon in their race north and are driving on Kanggye, 20 miles south of the Manchurian border.

The South Korean advance is bearing down on Kanggye so fast the Reds are fleeing the city toward the frontier 20 miles north, a reconnaissance pilot reported.

Communist troops cut off behind the swift-moving United Nations spearheads were surrendering in droves.

SEOUL, Oct. 22 (AP).—Korean Republican forces drove within 50 miles of the Manchurian border today, chasing Korean Red Army remnants in a campaign that had become a rout.

[Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters, Tokyo, announced that since the beginning of the war, United Nations forces have rescued alive 136 Americans captured by the Communists, the United Press reported.

[The figure includes some of the 29 Americans who last week escaped from their North Korean captors in and north of Pyongyang.]

On the front to the north, an American headquarters spokesman said, North Korean resistance had reached its lowest ebb since the Reds started the war by invading South Korea June 25.

Field reports said Red resistance had collapsed so rapidly that enemy ground forces tried to surrender to Allied reconnaissance planes flying overhead.

American artillery and motor units with 800 men parachuted Saturday into the Sukchon-Sunchon area, 30 miles north of Pyongyang, reinforcing 4100 men of the 187th Airborne Regiment who had parachuted there Friday.

The original parachute operation trapped an estimated 28,000 Reds south of the jump area.

A third parachute drop of supplies was made Sunday. Although Allied ground forces from the south and east had linked up with the 'chutists, the resupply operation was being handled by air until stronger ground communications could be established.

The airborne 187th Regimental Combat Team was now together at its full combat strength of 4900 men, officers said.

30-Mile Field Off Wonsan

Korea Mine-laying Bossed By Russians, Says U.S. Admiral

ABOARD U. S. DESTROYER COLLETT off Wonsan, Korea, Oct. 22 (AP).—A 30-mile-long minefield which blocked off the east coast Communist port of Wonsan was laid with Soviet mines under Russian supervision, an American admiral declared today.

Five Allied minesweepers have been sunk thus far in Korean waters.

Rear Admiral Allen E. Smith, commander of the United Nations blockade and escort force in Korea, told a news conference that the Wonsan minefield showed such mastery of this type of sea warfare that:

"The United States must put minesweeping on the same priority level as anti-submarine and carrier warfare."

He added: "The Russians apparently have everything we have and everything the Germans had in mining techniques."

Admiral Smith, of Detroit, Mich., admitted the Korean war "caught us halfway between the research stage and getting it (counter-measures) into the field. He predicted that within one year the United States will have cruisers which can launch guided missiles at mine fields.

Capt. R. T. Spofford of Schenectady, N. Y., in charge of the Wonsan mine-sweeping operation, said it was a vast field of between 2000 and 3000 mines. He said there was "plenty of evidence" the Russians supplied the mines, mine-laying equipment and supervision.

The Wonsan minefield, Spofford said, "was well-planned under expert supervision to create a fortress and prevent troops from landing on the beaches."

The magnetic mines are so modern that in less than 60 feet of water the anti-magnetic equipment of American Navy ships is ineffecive, the two naval officers disclosed.

Quirino Moves To Stop Island Revolt Spread

Habeas Corpus Right Barred in Sedition, Insurrection Cases

MANILA, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—President Elpidio Quirino suspended the privilege of habeas corpus today for persons held for sedition or rebellion.

"There is an actual state of rebellion in many localities and there is danger this movement may extend throughout the country," Quirino said in a proclamation.

The president's office said suspension of the habeas corpus privilege has the effect of holding indefinitely and without right of bail all persons arrested for rebellion, insurrection or sedition, "or other crimes committeed in furtherance thereof or incident thereto or in connection therewith, anywhere in this country."

Quirino said that numerous cases of "brutal acts" in different municipalities in recent months and the roundup of no fewer than 100 persons who are known leaders of rebellious movements "convinced me there is an actual state of rebellion in many localities."

In Manila, 105 Hukbalahap Communist suspects were arrested Wednesday. They are still in jail and presumably are being charged with rebellion.

Quirino said his action was based on a "summary of raids and atrocities of the Huks from 1946 to date"

U. S. Considers Berlin Worker Cut of 120,000

Move Outside Country Called for Under Plan For Economic Revival

NYHT News Service

The United States is considering a plan to move up to 120,000 West Berlin skilled orkers, with their families, factories and machine tools, to other countries, it was learned last night.

The aim is to siphon off unemployed skilled workers and put West Berlin on its feet as a self-sufficient, economically sound unit.

The plan was drawn up by the office of the United States high commissioner for Germany, John J. McCloy, and submitted to the Economic Cooperation Administration. It would be financed by ECA counterpart funds.

This master program includes recommendations for a new Berlin equivalent of the RFC, with wide powers to finance desirable developments, issuance of West Berlin liberty bonds, purchase of preferred stock in West Berlin banks by the Reconstruction Loan Corporation, and guarantee of Berlin bank deposits by the German federal republic in Bonn.

It would also make available 324 million west marks ($77,112,000) of investment capital and 350 million west marks ($83,300,000) of working capital, considered the two keys to the recovery of the city. It would ask special treatment for Berlin products on world markets, and special facilities for tourists as an important source of revenue.

American authorities believe that if the basic recommendations of this report are accepted West Berlin within the next 18 months would experience: A rise in production to 75 percent of the 1936 level (present rate is 30 percent), reduction of unemployment by some 120,00 workers (294,398 as of August), reduction of German aid to Berlin and elimination of ECA relief aid, and solution of Berlin's credit expansion needs by increasing the capitalization of Berlin banks.

In presenting the report, William E. Weiss, chief of the economic affairs division of the United States high commissioner's office, asked that the plan be adopted for the coming year, and "that one person have the sole responsibility of carrying out its aims."

Starving GIs Promised Food, Herded In Field, Shot

Americans Slain Holding Out Bowls; Twenty-One Survive Machine Guns

By Don Whitehead

SUNCHON, North Korea, Oct. 21 (Delayed) (AP).—Korean Reds massacred at least 68 American prisoners of war Friday night near the Sunchon railway tunnel 10 miles north of here.

The Communist guards led their prisoners from a train into fields under the pretext of taking them to supper. Then they machine-gunned them.

Sixty-six were killed on the spot. Two others died during the night of wounds.

By some miracle, at least 21 men, many of them wounded, lived through the hour-long massacre to tell the story of horror.

The survivors have been flown to Japan for treatment.

(Discovery of the bodies marked the failure of efforts to rescue the prisoners before the Reds either killed them or carried them north to Manchuria.

(Their rescue was one of the objects of paratroop landings north of Pyongyang, but the train had cleared the area several hours before the drop was made.

(Wire dispatches indicated that American tanks and planes were heading north of the Sunchon area searching for both the fleeing death train, and any Americans still on it, and another train reported carrying more American prisoners.)

The slaughter of the American prisoners was equal to anything I saw in 1945 at Buchenwald, the infamous Nazi concentration camp.

The thin, emaciated bodies of the men, who had been prisoners more than two months, were piled in three groups along the railroad tracks. One heap of 17 lay in a gully hidden by underbrush. Another pile of 15 was sprawled in a cornfield.

The others lay in a mass grave which the North Koreans had tried to hide in a ditch beside the tracks.

These men had been shot, piled one on the other and their bodies covered with earth.

Here in the autumn-tinted hills, these American prisoners had come to the end of their death march to the north.

Some Americans escaped from the train before the Reds decided to machine-gun their prisoners. Those have been making their way south for several days. We found seven of them as our little group set out to investigate a rumor the Reds had massacred a train-load of Americans.

I set out from Sunchon with Brig. Gen. Frank A. Allen of Cleveland, deputy commander of the First Cavalry Division, and Richard Tucker of the Baltimore Sun to check on the reported

2 Boys And Man Reported Lost In Huge Cave

HARLANSBURG, Pa. (Monday), Oct. 23 (AP).—Hundreds of volunteers mobilized early today to search for two boys and a man reported lost in a huge cave near this western Pennsylvania community, 60 miles north of Pittsburgh.

The trio was last seen at 2 p. m. yesterday.

As each hour passed more and more searchers came to the scene.

Sheriff Frank L. Coen of nearby New Castle, identified the missing trio as Eddie McClelland, 15; Ernest Malinak, 26, a construction company employe, and Herbert Harkless, 15. All are from Harlansburg.

Huge searchlights were brought to the scene.

Two bloodhounds also were used in the search. "It's a terrible thing if they're lost in the cave because no one knows just how far the cave extends under the earth's surface," a member of the searching party said.

U. S. Reds Defy Registration Law On Eve of Deadline

American Communists yesterday defied the Federal Communist-control law on the eve of Monday's deadline for Reds and "front" groups to register with the Justice Department.

The stiff penalties they face—fines up to $10,000 and jail terms up to five years for each day of non-registration—will not go into force, however, until the Government formally establishes that a person or group is required to register.

The "party line" was reiterated yesterday by a spokesman at Communist headquarters in New York. He said it would be an "educated guess" that refusal to register, first announced September 23, still stands.

Wants $100 Million More

World Bank Offers Tito Loan; He Holds Out For Better Terms

BELGRADE, Oct. 22 (U.P.).—The World Bank has offered Yugoslavia a 200 million dollar loan, but Premier Marshal Tito's government is holding out for better terms, a high Yugoslav source said tonight.

Vladimir Velebit, deputy minister of foreign trade, will leave for the United States this week to negotiate with President Eugene Black and other officials of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

It was said tonight that Black, during his visit to Belgrade September 18-25, offered the Tito government:

1. A total of 200 million dollars in loans over the next four years.

2. The World Bank would be the sole financier of Yugoslavia and all further credit for the Tito government would have to be approved first by the bank.

3—Repayment would begin two years after the last loan.

The Yugoslavs asked for $300,000,000—$100,000,000 more than the bank is willing to give—and want the loan in the next two years with repayments to begin in 1954.

Black and his experts reportedly told the Yugoslavs that in their opinion the maximum debt Yugoslavia could incur with hope of repayment was an additional $200,000,000. Yugoslavia has received $55,000,000 in three loans from the United States Export-Import Bank in the past two years and one of eight million sterling ($22,400,000) from Britain.

The Yugoslavs argue that in order to develop new industries to the point where the country can wipe out its present trade deficit and have enough of a surplus to begin loan repayment, $300,000,000 worth of industrial equipment and supplies are needed.

Presentiment Fulfilled

Pastor's Dream Comes True; He Takes Mt. Vernon Pulpit

The Washington Post

WELCOMED—Judge Benjamin Littleton (left), chairman of the board of stewards, extends a welcome to Dr. and Mrs. Albert P. Shirkey at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church

A presentiment was fulfilled, and an unusual success story came to its climax in the pulpit of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church yesterday.

The central figure was a former traveling salesman. In his teens, he attended services at the historic church, and had a strange feeling that someday he would be its minister.

His youthful dream was half forgotten in the ensuing years. He turned to the ministry, serving several small Virginia churches, before coming to Washington as minister of Francis Asbury Methodist Church.

Then he was whisked away to pastorates in San Antonio and Houston.

Yesterday, however, almost three decades after first attending services at the Mount Vernon church, the Rev. Albert P. Shirkey realized his youthful aspiration.

Golfer 'Bub' Worsham Killed In Carolina As Car Overturns

WAKE FOREST, N. C., Oct. 22. (Spl.).—Marvin C. (Bubby) Worsham, 20, youngest member of the famed Washington, D. C., golf clan, was killed in an automobile accident near here early today.

Also killed with Worsham was Eugene Scheer, 19, of Jeffersonville, Ind. Both were Wake Forest College athletes.

The car in which they were riding, owned by Worsham, hit a bridge abutment near here and overturned.

State Highway Patrolman Burchette said the car was headed toward Wake Forest from Durham when the accident occurred, about 1 a. m. The vehicle left the highway, struck an embankment on the left side, then rammed the abutment of the Neuse River bridge and plunged down an embankment.

The car was almost demolished. The scene of the wreck is about

Keyserling Urges Controls Machinery

Consultant On Missiles To Be Named

By The Associated Press

Defense officials yesterday disclosed a plan for naming a special guided missiles consultant to Secretary George C. Marshall. Names of possible appointees already are under study.

It was taken for granted that the development signals some sort of major step-up in the program, which already has high priority.

And the background of the only man whose name the Defense informants specifically mentioned in connection with the new post offered a possible clew to the nature of that step-up.

The man is K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corp., automobile manufacturers.

Assignment of the top advisory spot to a man with extensive experience in industrial production might indicate that enough of the pioneering and scientific work has been finished to shift emphasis into output of weapons.

The Defense informants, who could not be quoted by name, said there are others on the list of possibilities to fill the job but did not name them.

Sources close to Keller himself disclosed that he has been working with the Defense Department on the guided missile program, presumably on a somewhat informal basis.

The latest report of Keller's activities appeared in the Wall Street Journal, which said plans were on foot in Washington to boost outlays on the guided missile program to three billion dollars to be spent over the next several years. The story said one idea is a central project so that "push button" arms can be steamrollered through in the manner of the atom bomb. It added that Keller had been asked if he would head the project.

By the United Press

Chairman Leon H. Keyserling of President Truman's Council of Economic Advisers said yesterday some wage-price controls may be necessary to halt inflation and that necessary machinery should be set up promptly.

He also called for another tax increase—still bigger than the $4,600,000,000 rise recently imposed by Congress—"as soon as we can get it." The aim, he said, is to siphon off surplus buying power and reduce competition for scarce goods.

Assistant CIO Research Director Nat Goldfinger said, however, that wage controls at this time are neither fair nor necessary. He favored selective price controls without wage curbs, arguing that wages have been lagging behind prices.

Keyserling indicated strongly that the Administration will not turn to hard and fast controls until it is convinced that a 2.5 percent rise in living costs since the Korean war cannot be reversed by higher taxes, credit curbs, allocations and priorities.

Other economic developments:

CIO Research Director Stanley Ruttenberg sharply denied claims that newly won wage increases are responsible for inflation. He said commodity speculation is behind the recent sharp rise in prices and workers will need more money to meet its impact on retail prices.

[Ruttenberg's denial came in a letter he wrote to the editor of the monthly economic letter of the National City Bank of New York, saying the October issue of that publication gave the impression that wage increases are the major cause for price rises.

[He quoted the bank's letter as saying "inflationary pressures have been augmented by a flood of wage increases, which has already engulfed much of the country's industry and plainly will engulf more."]

Doctor Draft Effect Here To Be Studied

The District Medical Draft Advisory Committee will get a preliminary report Tuesday night on the effect the medical draft will have on Washington hospitals.

Most of the doctors involved are now taking internships or residentships in District hospitals. The committee feels that indiscriminate assignment to the armed forces might seriously deplete hospitals here.

A five-doctor subcommittee, therefore, has been assigned to evaluate the situation in each hospital. The subcommittee will report to the full group Tuesday night.

Meantime, the committee expects today to have questionnaires from the 299 doctors, dentists and veterinarians who registered under the medical draft law last Monday.

Some of these, the committee believes, registered although the law does not apply to them. The questionnaires are expected to reduce the number actually eligible for the draft, since some doctors registered merely to be on the safe side.

All doctors under 50 who served less than 21 months in the service were required to register.

But the law was aimed primarily at doctors who took training under the Army Specialized Training Program (ASTP) and the Navy's similar "V-12" program, and served less than 21 months.

The local doctor quota has not been learned yet.

Under Selective Service machinery, the Medical Draft Advisory Committee will make recommendations in individual cases. Local draft boards will make the selections and are not bound to accept the recommendations of the advisory group.

Push Toward Manchuria Line

Associated Press Wirephoto Map

THREE MAIN DRIVES—South Korean forces put full steam behind three main drives for the Manchurian border yesterday as Communist resistance grew weaker. One force, believed to be the ROK First Division (A), was at Kujang, 60 miles from the border, while in the center was the ROK Eighth (B) just south of Huichon, 50 miles from Manchuria. Some elements were near Tokchon. On the east coast the RAK Capital Division took Pukchong (C) and headed north. From Pyongyang the United States First Cavalry is in Chinnampo. The South Korean Sixth Division is headed for Anju on the Chongchon River which is the next natural defense line if the Reds can gather the strength to use it

Manchurian frontier from the west, east and central portions of the upper Korean peninsula.

"ROKS" were outwalking their communications, so swift was their advance against diminished resistance.

These were their positions early Sunday as spotted by American air observers:

1. The ROK Capital Division on the east seized Pukchong, a big town 49 miles northeast of the Hamhung-Hungnam industrial center, then thrust north, away from the Sea of Japan. They were seen moving about 51 miles south of the village of Sang. That village is 22 miles south of the Yalu River boundary of Korea and Manchuria.

2. In the center, the nearest column to the border was identified as the ROK Eighth Division. It was just south of Huichon, 50 miles from Manchuria and 90 miles north of Pyongyang.

3. On the west, another column, believed by air observers to be the ROK First Division, was at Kujang (Kukant), about 60 miles south of the border.

Allied aircraft pressed around-the-clock strikes to try to cut off retreating Reds, but found targets fairly scanty.

B-26 Invaders attacked rolling stock, convoys and miscellaneous vehicles throughout Saturday night and continued Sunday, generally in the vicinity of Huichon and Sinanju, the latter on the west coast north of Pyongyang.

B-29 Superforts from Japan and Okinawa blasted rail and highway lines from Huichon to Kanggye, 58 miles north, and from Pakchon to Singchang, 28 miles from the Manchurian border on the northwest.

The air spokesman said a considerable movement of Red troops was observed northwest of the Sukchon-Sunchon trap. The enemy was retreating northwestward.

One B-26 Night Intruder early Sunday attacked a 30-vehicle convoy, damaging 14. Another 10-vehicle convoy was hit Saturday in the same area.

Intelligence reports indicated that Friday's air drop, which was delayed by bad weather, might have been made too late to catch the maximum number of Red troops withdrawing from Pyongyang.

Capture of 13,000 more prisoners during the past 24 hours reduces the North Korean force to around 47,000 men, a United States spokesman said. Prisoners now total 95,000.

In the Sukchon area, a Communist force estimated by the spokesman at 3000 men had been dispersed into the hills and secondary roads leading north.

The British Twenty-seventh Brigade encountered stiff but brief resistance from part of this force Saturday before pushing northward to join American 'chutists near Sukchon. The skirmish was near Yongju, on the main highway about eight miles south of Sukchon. The Reds withdrew, apparently intending to fight only a delaying action.

A force of South Korean infantrymen and American tanks, rolling along the highway network toward Anju, near the west coast, reached a point about 50 miles north of Pyongyang, but an Allied spokesman declined to pinpoint its position, destination or mission.

This, apparently, was the same outfit field dispatches reported in pursuit of a train believed to be carrying American prisoners.

The train had not been overtaken, but sketchy reports from the field told of rescue of 100 or more Americans farther back, at points south and north of Sunchon.

Some reports said as many as 500 prisoners may have been freed, but there was no confirmation of so great a number.

Associated Press Correspondent O. H. P. King, who flew over the area in an observation plane, estimated one group of possibly 100 Americans put down a large Red Cross panel to mark their position, 8 miles southwest of Sunchon.

Tobin Picks Goodwin To Head Office Of Defense Manpower

Labor Secretary Maurice J. Tobin yesterday appointed Robert C. Goodwin, director of the department's Bureau of Employment Security, to head the new office of Defense Manpower.

Goodwin, who was director of the War Manpower Commission during World War II, will continue as Employment Security director while performing his new function. He will be assisted as Defense Manpower director by Edward L. Keenan, deputy director of Employment Security.

Since 1930, when he became supervisor of the Cincinnati Public Employment Service, Goodwin has been active in the employment field. From 1935 to 1937, when he joined the Social Security Board, he was director of the Hamilton County, Ohio, work relief program. In 1942 he was named regional director for the War Manpower Commission in Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky, and became director of the commission in 1945.

When the United States Employment Service was transferred to the Labor Department in September, 1945, Goodwin became its director and, on July 1, 1948, was named director of the Bureau of Employment Security, administering USES and the unemployment insurance program.

Pastor's Dream Comes True

vealed the story for the first time as he took over the ministry of the largest Methodist church in the East.

Dr. Shirkey told the congregation that his teen-age predilection influenced him in accepting the local call.

Judge Welcomes Him

Official welcome for the new pastor came from Judge Benjamin Littleton, chairman of the church's board of stewards. The judge also read a telegram of good wishes from the Rev. John W. Rustin, the former minister. Dr. Rustin left the church after 14 years to accept a call to Belmont Methodist Church, Nashville, Tenn.

Dr. Shirkey's first sermon called for "a spirit of togetherness" of people and ministry not only for saving the individual but also for having society.

He said people should remember it's God, "not only in the beginning, but in between and in the end."

Balanced Banking

Many American banks are specialized. Some fill the needs of individuals primarily. Some are exclusively savings banks. Others cater to large businesses, while still others are purely trust companies.

At the Union Trust Company we follow a policy of "balanced banking" designed to supply every banking and trust service to meet the needs of the people of our community.

We offer Washingtonians an efficient Commercial Department to fill the requirements of business, large or small; a Consumer Credit Department which makes loans to individuals for constructive purposes; a Real Estate Department for all types of mortgage loans; a Home Modernization Department to help you maintain and improve your property; and a Trust Department highly qualified to serve both institutions and individuals.

Also available to you here are regular or "popular" checking accounts, savings facilities (we pay 1½% interest on sums up to $2,500 and 1% over that amount), safe deposit boxes, travelers' checks, treasurer's checks, letters of credit, foreign and domestic exchange, night depository and other banking services.

Whatever your banking requirements, visit the Union Trust today and let us explain how we can be of service to you.

Foreign Aid Costs Set at 42½ Billion

By the United Press

A Congressional committee reported yesterday the United States has spent $42,591,000,000 for foreign aid assistance since V-J day.

That adds up to about $283 for every American man, woman and child and almost equals the cost of operating the Federal government for the six years preceding World War II.

The report was issued on the heels of former President Herbert Hoover's warning that foreign aid is bleeding the American taxpayer white.

The figure was compiled for the Senate-House Expenditures Committee headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.). It covers 28 programs of military and economic aid. It does not cover programs which President Truman has in preparation.

The committee researches said it is a conservative figure because (1) it allows for loan repayments; (2) it is based on value of goods sent abroad and not the ultimate dollar cost, and (3) it covers actual money outlays, not authorizations.

A check of congressional leaders by the United Press indicated the total, plus new demands from nations throughout the world, plus Hoover's warning, will become the elements of a major fight over foreign aid in the next Congress.

When Congress reconvenes November 27, President Truman will present new requests which are expected to include more foreign arms help, another round of Marshall Plan assistance, reconstruction funds for Korea, and food for drought-stricken Yugoslavia. Some, if not all, of these, may have to be acted on by the new Congress, starting in January.

The Byrd committee figures showed that in the period of August 1, 1945, through fiscal 1951, $36,539,000,000 was given in United States economic aid. That was for emergency feeding of war-ravaged peoples and the reconstruction of economic life abroad. In addition, $6,052,000,000 was spent for military aid, and this program is just getting under way.

By far the largest single sum has gone for the four-year Marshall recovery plan program for Western Europe. Expenditures, cluding those laid down for the remainder of fiscal 1951, run to $11,326,000,000.

Other large sums in this category went for postwar UNRRA aid, the British loan, the International Monetary Fund, Government and relief of occupied territories, and Export-Import Bank loans.

On the military side, the committee estimated that by July 1, 1951, five billion dollars will be spent for the Atlantic Pact mutual defense assistance program, mainly arms aid for Western Europe. Additional money has gone to help arm Nationalist China, for the Greek-Turkey aid program, and five million dollars for Latin and South America military aid from left-over lend-lease money.

Gaitskell Post Seen Proving Attlee Power

LONDON, Oct. 22 (U.P.)—Labor Prime Minister Clement Attlee has successfully put at rest reports that his party was dangerously split with internal rows.

Attlee has shown that without question he is not only the Labor government's Prime Minister and the Labor Party's political leader. He has shown that he is master of both.

The latest evidence was his decision to appoint a comparative youngster and former university professor, Hugh Gaitskell, 44, to be the new Chancellor of the Exchequer. Gaitskell was not a member of the party hierarchy.

The appointment was on merit, and it caused a lot of moaning inside the party because the chancellory is the fourth most important cabinet job and its holder is usually one of the "big four" of the cabinet.

But Attlee ignored all political considerations and appointed the man who even the disappointed admit was best suited and equipped to do the difficult economic financial job.

Gaitskell was not only jumped over Labor Party men who feel their longer party service entitles them to a promotion—such as Health Minister Aneurin Bevan—but also over some of Gaitskell's old bosses such as Harold Wilson, president of the board of trade.

Starling Horde Invades English North Sea Town

BRIDLINGTON, Eng., Oct. 22 (AP).—Everybody in this North Sea town of 20,000 was awakened early today by the mass chirruping of hundreds of thousands — some even said millions—of starlings.

There were starlings everywhere—under the bed, in the fireplace and on buoys bobbing in the harbor.

The chattering horde seemed to be working on schedule. After two hours, as if in response to an order, the flock took wing and Bridlington was quiet again. There were a few stragglers.

Policy Change Is Up To U. S., Pravda Says

MOSCOW, Oct. 22 (AP).—Pravda replied today to President Truman's San Francisco speech by declaring it is not Russia but the United States which must change its policy if a new world war is to be avoided.

(The President, last Tuesday night, said: "We are increasing our armed strength because Soviet policies leave us no other choice. The Soviet Union can change this situation. It has only to give concrete and positive proof of its intention to work for peace."

(Then he said if the Soviet Union really wants peace it can prove it by living up to the principles of the United Nations Charter, by joining the United Nations in calling upon North Koreans to lay down their arms, by lifting the Iron Curtain to permit the free exchange of information and ideas and by joining in the United Nations to establish a workable system of collective security.)

Pravda categorically rejected each of Truman's four points, adding: "Such rude, ridiculous pretensions could originate only in the mind of a warmonger." The fault in each case, said the Communist Party organ, lies with the United States.

The article was written by Y. Viktorov, who penned Pravda's rejection of Harold Stassen's proposal for a face-to-face peace talk with Prime Minister Stalin.

Cabinet of France May Fall Over German Rearmament

PARIS, Oct. 22 (U.P.)—France's coalition government is split wide open on the question of rearming Germany and political quarters foresaw the possibility tonight that the cabinet may fall when the situation comes up in the National Assembly Tuesday.

Premier Rene Pleven, Foreign Minister Robert Schuman, Defense Minister Jules Moch and Justice Minister Rene Mayer met today in an attempt to reach agreement before the cabinet meets as a whole Monday.

The cabinet must approve the text of a German amrament declaration which Pleven is to make during a full-dress debate in the Assembly Tuesday.

In effect, Pleven's statement will constitute instructions for Defense Minister Moch when he flies to Washington later in the week to attend a meeting of Atlantic Pact defense ministers.

Most Atlantic Pact powers support the American plan to include German units in a Western European defense force. France's position might swing the balance, considering her key position. But Frenchmen, from the man in the street to cabinet members, are sharply divided.

Schuman is reported tto favor limited German rearmament. The large Communist bloc is naturally against it and the Socialists, including Defense Minister Moch, say they will agree to German rearmament only after Europe has united under a genuine political authority. Enough other groups stick to the traditional French fear of German militarism to make an Assembly majority against the American plan possible.

Russia's note to the United States, France and Great Britain saying she would not "tolerate" the rearmament of Western Germany, and the declaration in Prague of Iron Curtain foreign ministers on Germany strengthened Socialist and Communist opposition.

Russia's sudden shift of cold war strategy from the Far East to Germany seemed timed to fit in with the French fear of German rearmament and widen the split in French opinion.

Continued French opposition to the American rearmament plan would seriously divide the Atlantic countries and might cause a retaliatory change in American arms aid to France.

Victory Is Sure, U. S. Minister Tells Bao Dai

SAIGON, Indo-China, Oct. 22 (AP).—United States Minister Donald R. Heath, at his first meeting today with Chief of State Bao Dai, expressed confidence in ultimate victory of the French-sponsored Viet Nam over the Communist-led Viet Minh forces.

Heath presented his credentials to the ex-Emperor at a ceremony in the palace at Dalat.

Meanwhile, a French military spokesman said the withdrawal of the garrison from Langson, the latest post to be evacuated, was proceeding without serious fighting. The French are taking up new positions along the Red River delta, before the cities of Hanoi and Haiphong.

Duff, Myers Exploit Scandals

can hold Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and gain out-State as well if the voters turn out.

Suicide of the chief of the Philadelphia vice squad before his scheduled appearance before a Federal grand jury investigating numbers rackets has revived public interest in the Philadelphia city scandals.

Democrats Get Break

Up-State the Democrats drew their first blood in a Federal grand jury investigation of GI school profiteering. Morgan Bird, political associate of Duff's running mate, Judge Fine, was indicted for conspiracy to defraud the Government.

Quite apart from the crime fracas, which Democrats rate second only to the Duff-Grundy split as a Republican liability, was an unexpected Democratic break in this city.

Only a few weeks before the election, a GOP board of tax review, reputedly controlled by Grundy Republicans, sharply increased tax assessments on nonbusiness property holders in Philadelphia. And that constitutes a crime, in the eyes of some city voters.

Outside this city, which is his home bailiwick, Myers hasn't been faring so well in the rural areas, particularly in his efforts to pin Duff down to a discussion of issues.

Resting on his record as a Progressive Governor, Duff has ignored daily challenges from Myers to say how he would have voted on all of the major issues that came before the last Congress. Duff calls Myers a "rubber stamp" for the Truman Administration and accuses him of voting for "pork barrel things."

"I will not wear any man's collar." is Duff's most familiar line.

Duff Against "Free Rides"

"I will support a bipartisan foreign policy. But I believe in a foreign policy where the nations we aid should also seek in good faith to aid themselves, instead of expecting a free ride at the expense of American taxpayers."

Myers tells the voters Duff is taking credit in Pennslyvania for the same river and highway improvement (pork barrel) projects for which he, Myers, voted in Congress. He hints that some of Duff's bipartisanship has an isolationist ring. He denies he's a "Yes man" for Truman. In fact, he says Truman is supporting the convention platform which he, Myers, wrote for the party.

The Democratic Senator, has been pretty much on his own in this campaign, but Administration help in the ever-willing shape of Vice President Barkley, Attorney General McGrath and Secretary of Labor Tobin is now headed into the State. Mr. Truman won't put in an appearance. Republicans wish he would.

Evidence that Republicans are harder pressed than anyone suspected they would became recently in "peace" overtures to the Grundy faction by Judge Fine. Duff's running mate. Duff professes coolness to Fine's olive branch efforts.

Jay Cooke, Fine's opponent in the primaries, and one of the party's big money raisers in the past, announced he was leaving for Florida after one such "harmony" conference. Fine gained one concession. Cooke said he would be back to vote Republican in November.

The aging Joe Grundy pulled out for Maine when one Duff-Fine rally was held in his Bucks County back yard, but some of his lieutenants showed up. Obviously the deep primary wounds haven't healed and probably won't. Duff isn't anxious to bind them. He's "boss" of his party in this State now.

The "Red" issue is figuring more largely in the Congressional races than in the Senate campaign. Anticipating it would be raised, Myers bolted the Truman line to vote for the McCarran anti-Red bill.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

FOOTBALL, a notoriously rugged game, makes almost inhuman demands on both the mental and physical resources of its players. Unlike his prototype of a half century ago, the gridiron star of today cannot get by on brawn alone. Brawn helps, of course, but only if and as it is coordinated with an agile mind. Lightning perception and analysis, the ability to make correct decisions instantly and a tremendous memory are even more requisite than a 200-pound frame. It is highly significant that the traditional diet of the footballer in season is beefsteak. Here is food at its most succulent, health-giving best. Steak furnishes the body with strength and the mind with agility. It satisfies the appetite without dulling the senses. It is easily digested and its rich, robust flavor is unique in that none ever tires of it. It can be, and is (by the football player), enjoyed daily. In view of these facts, those College Park cheer leaders might well conclude each cheer for "Maryland! Maryland! Maryland!" with . . .

"Steaks! Steaks! Steaks!"

And now that I find myself on the subject of steaks, I'd like to call your attention to the Sirloins we have recently received. These great juicy, butter-tender steaks, so delicately marbled with rich, creamy-hued suet, were cut from cattle that spent all last winter and spring luxuriating in the lush feeding pens of the Mid-West; pampered darlings of cattle-wise farmers, stuffing themselves on rich corn and wheat sileage! I have really never seen finer Sirloins than those we are privileged to serve you today. May I suggest that you order, as your accompaniment to our Sirloin dinner, a bottle of the superb Inglenook Vineyard Red Pinot (Vintage 1944) we have just received? This fine, full-bodied Burgundy-type wine is warranted to add enjoyment to a meal without peer! A small bottle (ample for 3) is only a dollar-and-a-quarter. Our address: 19th at K sts., NW.

Mr. Earl Campbell, esteemed head of the Campbell Music Company, paid us his first visit last week, accompanied by Messrs. Boushka, Capt. & Mrs. R. J. Lombard, USA, and Mr. & Mrs. L. Piretsky. Old friends we were happy to greet included Att'y. Robert D. Oglesby, Miss Gladys W. Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. R. Thorpe, of Liverpool, England. Come again soon to 19th and K Sts., NW.

PEOPLE I WOULD RATHER BE (if I weren't myself): Hon. T. (for Thomas) Alan Goldsborough, Justice of the United States District Court. Because he overcame the handicap of being the scion of a family of outstanding Jeffersonian statesmen to add even greater lustre to the name; because his long career as a member of nine consecutive U. S. Congresses was marked by distinguished service to his country and his Maryland constituents; because to his degrees from Washington College and the University of Maryland have been added a list of honors "as long as your arm"; because his fearless impartiality on the bench has earned him an unprecedented degree of respect and acclaim and finally because in spite of his tremendous achievements he remains, basically, an unpretentious and natural Eastern Shoreman with the native connoisseur's weakness for Chesapeake crustaceans . . . and a cultivated predilection for filets mignon!

Just a year ago, we "put down" in great wooden kegs, our annual batch of mince-meat. Into it went beef, suet, currants, raisins, sherry wine, grated lemon peel, apples, butter, brown sugar, thin-sliced citron, mace, cinnamon, grated nutmeg, ground cloves, molasses, cider and a quantity of our finest imported Cognac brandy. Now, perfectly aged, we're serving this delectible mince-meat in crispy-flaked pies of transcendent goodness, hot from the oven and unbelievably savory! The finest quarter's worth of good eating ever! Try one at 19th & K Sts., NW.

It's headline-new because of its big, big parking space . . . its just-a-step nearness to street car and bus lines.

New as its spacious auditorium for community events . . . or your hair-do in its Charles of the Ritz Beauty Salon.

But it is as old in integrity and know-how as Woodward & Lothrop's 70 years a-growing can make it.

For you and all your family's daily shopping . . . it's a beautiful store . . . "old" and brand-new.

We'll soon announce the opening date . . . plan to be among the first to "meet" your store.

They Ain't Done Right by Byron

By Richard L. Coe

THE POET BYRON, who had a club foot and 45 times as many love affairs as Amber Whatshername, is a mere specter of his gregarious self in a new picture which proves that movie making is as troublesome in Britain as it is here.

Laboring under the uninspired title of "The Bad Lord Byron," the Trans-Lux import gives you only an insipid male flirt having none of the heroic proportions which made him one of the most dynamic figures of his day. Perhaps the J. Arthur Rank organization was trying to make up for the fact that there is no mention of him in Westminster Abbey's Poets' Corner, a belated but ineffectual gallantry.

Not that making a convincing biography of this statesman-poet-battler would have been easy; the lives of Shakespeare, Shelley and Shaw would present similar insurmountables. For not only does a writer of fire live essentially in his works, but in this case the whole panorama of early nineteenth century Europe is fundamental. To comprehend Byron's dynamic appeal to his contemporaries demands a masterly screen play which this, despite an imaginative form, is not.

A clue to the fact that the producers recognized this lies in the credits given for the picture's authorship. It's blandly announced: "The producers gratefully acknowledge the contributions to the screen play made by Terence Young, Anthony Thorne, Peter Quennell, Laurence Kitchin, Paul Holt, and, of course, Lord Byron himself."

Which suggests that no one is quite willing to take full responsibility for the writing, most of the people named are biographers of Byron.

Equally indicative of the screen story's problem is the omission of the name Harriet Beecher Stowe. For it was our "Uncle Tom's Cabin" Harriet whose defense of Lady Byron in 1869 brought up the controversial incest angle which has since plagued the poet's name. Though Byron's half-sister, Augusta Leigh, appears in the film, if their relationship was other than casual I was dozing at the time.

Disjointed Composition

Which is the weary fact about the film, its dullness. Despite emphasis on Byron's more important ladies, Caroline Lamb, Annabella Milbanke, who married him, and Teresa Guiccioli, his "last and only love," and the foray into Greece, the scheme of piecing together, at his deathbed, what kind of a man he was, this patchwork of his life is loosely knitted. While the flashback device seems a likely one, the result is jerky and disjointed.

Nor is Dennis Price effective as the dynamic poet; the limp is played down; so is his tendency towards overweight. Price, who was very good as the chap who killed Alec Guinness eight times in "Kind Hearts and Coronets," is but a pallid approximation in one of the few recent roles I'd have enjoyed watching Orson Welles essay.

Flat and rambling as it is, it is some mark of the picture's aim that one can treat reviewing it as a serious job. Still, "be thy intents wicked or charitable, thou comest in such a questionable shape!"

THE TRANS-LUX Saturday schedule was way off the Show Time listing and may be again today, an intelligence included herewith, to warn you that all times are supplied by the theaters, not manufactured out of this paper's fantasy. . . . Perhaps in the future the T-L will be more accurate. . . . Or considerate.

A NEW DODGE sedan will go to the winner of the safe driving contest sponsored by the Warner Theater chain and Leo Rocca, Inc.

"THE BAD LORD BYRON," a Pentagon Pictures release of J. Arthur Rank presentation and Sydney Box production, produced by Aubrey Baring, directed by David MacDonald. At the Trans-Lux.

. . . The contest, which started yesterday and will continue until December 13, is based on weekly movie shorts depicting traffic violations by both vehicles and pedestrians. Participants will identify violations shown in the pictures and check them on entry blanks. Also required is a suggestion on how to improve our traffic conditions. . . . Seven judges will do the final selecting, the District Commissioners Traffic Advisory Board announces . . . The highest score gets Mr. Rocca's Dodge for a merry Christmas.

THE GUNTON-TEMPLE Players will present Ivor Novello's comedy, "Fresh Fields," Thursday and Friday nights in the church's assembly room, 16th and Newton sts. . . . The play will be repeated November 1 through 4 under sponsorship of the general temple board of the Eastern Star. . . . In Director Mitchel Meyers' cast are: Larraine Proudley, George Potts, Marietta Clayton, Anna Braskamp, Lynn Wetzel, Robert Proudley, Enid Bartz, Bill Sabin and Frances Debram.

CASTING TONIGHT for the Fairlington Players' "Rackety Packety House," the first time the group has planned a production primarily for children, a good idea for a neighborhood with so large a small fry population . . . Apply at 8 o'clock in the Fairlington Administration bldg., 30th and Buchanan sts. S.

TWO OPENINGS tonight: Cyril Pritchard stars in "The Relapse," with his wife and London costar, Madge Elliott, at the Gayety; in supporting roles you'll find John Emery, Ruth Matteson, the Brattle Theater company of Massachusetts and Olney's vastly popular Philippa Bevans, who'll get an extra welcome in her voluminous Restoration gowns . . . And a World Premiere at Arena stage, E. P. Conkles' "The Delectable Judge," with Henry Danilowicz as Texas' famed Roy Bean, "The Law West of the Pecos;" this will not be reviewed until Wednesday's final editions.

Jewish Welfare Board Adopts 1951 Budget

CHICAGO, Oct. 22 (AP)—The National Jewish Welfare Board today adopted a 1951 budget of $2,049,922.

The budget, accepted as approved by the board's national finance council, includes $374,900 to cover a 1950 deficit caused by the unanticipated need for services and supplies furnished the armed forces in connection with the Korean war. The board earmarked $602,225 for serving the needs of Jews in the armed forces.

Need for Dispersal Of Agencies Argued

School Incident

Two Protests On Anacostia Action Made

Two antisegregation groups have sharply protested the District Board of Education's handling of the "Anacostia incident." In weekend letters to Board Chairman C. Melvin Sharpe, the District chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People reiterated a demand for a public hearing, "reopening the matter for a democratic settlement by the board."

In its letter, the Washington Fellowship, an interracial and interfaith organization, said the board's action "blackens the reputation of our Nation's Capital with intolerance once again."

The protests were in reaction to an October 18 ruling by the board which said that school officials had acted properly when they refused a mixed group of Sesquicentennial actors permission to present scenes from "Faith of Our Fathers" at the white Anacostia High School.

The NAACP letter termed the ruling "ridiculously absurd."

Referring to reports that Anacostia students objected to the performance, the Rev. Stephen Gill Spottswood, president of the District NAACP chapter, stated "it would seem to me to be the duty of the Board of Education to teach the students a lesson in democracy by presenting the cast. . . ."

"If such an intolerant thing were possible," stated the Washington Fellowship letter, referring to the same reports, "it would be a reflection upon the discipline in our public schools and upon the type of racial bigots we are in danger of turning out of our 100-percent segregated schools." The Fellowship urged reversal of the ruling "without delay."

Sharpe was unavailable for comment yesterday.

Dispersal of Government agencies was variously described last night as the only way to insure continued Government operation under atomic attack and as an incentive to confusion and inefficiency.

Speaking on radio station WWDC's "District Roundtable", Dr. Ralph E. Lapp, a nuclear physicist, said he considered Washington a prime target.

The only real defense against attack, he said, was dispersal of important agencies out of lethal range of a single A-bomb.

"Separating the different Government agencies will bring more confusion and less efficiency than we have now," said Rufus Lusk, president of the Washington Taxpayers Association. "It will make it almost impossible to do official business."

Tracy Augur, an urban planning officer in the General Services Administration, who helped formulate the dispersal plan, said the contemplated dispersal centers would not be far enough away from Washington to disrupt Government business.

The points will be within commuting distance to allow the needed face-to-face meetings of officials. In addition, he said, radio, telephone, and perhaps television could be used to facilitate communication.

The plan, for which no money has yet been appropriated, calls for new buildings to be within an hour's driving time from Washington. Initially, Augur said, it contemplates the transfer of about 40,000 Federal employes. In its final stage, the plan calls for the movement of between 75,000 and 100,000 employes.

The discussion was sponsored by the junior bar section of the District Bar Association. Harold D. Retting, a member of the bar association, was the moderator.

McKeldin to Speak At Takoma Park

Theodore R. McKeldin, Republican candidate for Governor, will be principal speaker at the annual dinner and dance of the Takoma Park (Md.) Chamber of Commerce, Thursday at 7 p. m., at at the Indian Spring Country Club, Silver Spring.

Other Maryland candidates who will be guests include Miss Vivian V. Simpson, secretary of state; her brother, Joseph B. Simpson, jr., Democratic candidate for the State Senate; County Councilman J. Douglas Bradshaw, Republican candidate for the House of Delegates and Takoma Park Councilman James R. Parkhill, Republican candidate for clerk of the Circuit Court.

Trade Board Unit To Visit Road Plan Sites

The proposed extension of North Capitol st., through the Soldiers' Home property, and the East Capitol st. bridge are among future project sites to be inspected Tuesday by the Highway Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

About 50 members will begin the tour at the Burlington Hotel at 12:45 p. m., immediately following a committee luncheon meeting.

Recent developments of the Washington highway network, including the Dupont Circle underpass, the new Fourteenth st. bridge, the South Capitol st. bridge and Whitehurst Freeway, will be visited.

The tour will be conducted by John Robertson, director of highways for the District, and members of the Highway department. They will furnish the committee with background information on costs, structural improvements and justifications for the work from a safety and traffic flow viewpoint.

CAP to Get Data Today On Civil Defense

Key Civil Air Patrol personnel from the 48 States, the District, Alaska, Puerto Rico and Hawaii will be briefed on the latest policies on civil defense planning today at the Annapolis Hotel.

The 52 CAP wing commanders, their Civil Defense coordinators and Air Force liaison officers will begin their all-day session at 9 a. m. with talks by Harold C. Stuart, assistant secretary of the Air Force, and James J. Wadsworth, acting director of the Office of Civil Defense.

The CAP also plans to formulate a program of coordination with the Nation's over-all defense plans, Maj. Gen. Lucas Beau, national CAP commander, announced. All CAP wings have offered their resources and facilities to State, local and territorial civil defense directors, Beau said.

The CAP is an official auxiliary of the United States Air Force and consists of 45,000 active volunteer civilian pilots, observers, ground crewmen and special radio and medical technicians.

Keeping The Door Open

The history of the last five years is ample proof that it would be dangerous to let the proposed peace talks by the Big Five, which have been unanimously approved by the Political Committee of the General Assembly, change the course of our rearmament policy. The resolution sponsored by Iraq and Syria is chiefly an expression of the eagerness of the small powers to see the East-West conflict ended. It also had the assent of all the big powers because none of them is willing to be placed in the position of being unwilling to discuss the issues that divide them. From their point of view it is part of the peace offensive that both sides are waging. John Foster Dulles, the American delegate, made it clear that he has little hope that the informal discussions called for will produce any striking results. But the United States is not going to turn its back on peace talks, however bleak the outlook may be.

In spite of the skepticism that goes along with the resolution, this is a logical time for new discussions. The events in Korea have given pointed emphasis to the determination of the free world to put down naked aggression by cooperative action through the United Nations. Last week the Political Committee approved by a vote of 50 to 5 the Acheson plan to enable the vetoless General Assembly to recommend action against any future aggressor. If this plan becomes effective in practice, it will give the free world a means of striking at any future invasion that Moscow might inspire its satellites to undertake. Adoption of the plan by the General Assembly may now be taken for granted, and the free world is rearming to put real strength behind U. N. decisions. The instigators of aggression are thus on notice that the only safe way of seeking adjustments is to carry them to the conference table. Undoubtedly this gives the conference table more meaning than it has had in the last few years.

Even Jacob Malik, Soviet delegate to the U. N., said the other day: "The record . . . shows that if there was no agreement yesterday or today, there may well be agreement tomorrow." The least that can be said is that the Russians are trying hard to give the impression that some agreement is possible. The same strategy is evident in the demand coming out of Prague for a four-power agreement to set up a unified government in Germany and withdraw all the occupation forces. Here the effort is undoubtedly to block the plans that are taking shape for the defense of Europe under the North Atlantic Treaty. The Prague maneuver does not in the slightest degree minimize the necessity of unifying the defense of Europe, but it does emphasize once more the part that world opinion plays in the East-West struggle and the necessity of always keeping the door open to discussion. The great advantage in the course now being followed is that it will give the free nations a chance to talk from a position of strength instead of weakness.

World Bank

In its last annual report the World Bank presented a defense of its usual policy of making loans for specific reconstruction or developmental projects. The aim of this policy is simply to make sure that loans will be used for productive purposes. At the same time it indicated that it did not consider itself committed to an inflexible lending technique to be applied without regard to the needs of a given situation, but was ready to finance groups of interrelated projects whenever feasible. The 10-million-dollar loan that the Bank has just agreed to make to eight Mexican commercial banks and to the official financing agency of the Mexican government, and the nine-million-dollar loan granted the recently established Industrial Development Bank of Turkey are of this character. Both loans will be used to finance the cost of imports required for private developmental projects.

By working through local financial institutions, the World Bank will be able to assist the development of private industry, particularly of enterprises whose individual capital needs are comparatively small, instead of confining its operations to the financing of large-scale enterprises. The chief danger of this sort of lending, of course, is that the financing institutions obtaining loans from the World Bank may dissipate funds by unwise loans. But that danger is obviated to a large extent by the terms of the loan agreements. For instance, the World Bank retains power to insure that the loans made by the Mexican banks are in conformity with its general standards and objectives, while all projects approved by the Turkish Industrial Development Bank that require foreign exchange, made available by the World Bank loan, will be subject to its scrutiny. Furthermore, an experienced official of the World Bank, Norman M. Tucker, has been appointed general manager of Turkey's Industrial Development Bank.

By assisting the growth of small-scale business enterprise in such fashion the World Bank can make a valuable contribution to the balanced development of the industries of backyard areas. And by placing its technical knowledge and managerial experience at the disposal of the local financing groups responsible for the screening of projects, it can also help to raise local standards of performance and encourage private capital to participate more freely in the financing of local enterprises.

So far there is no evidence that the new curbs on installment credit have had an adverse effect on over-all retail sales, although it is too soon to determine what the ultimate effect will be. It is doubtful whether that will ever be known, since restrictions on production resulting from allocations of scarce materials for defense use will doubtless eventually cut down the supply of various kinds of durable goods customarily sold on time, squeezing out customers prepared to meet stiffer sales terms. Probably a good deal of money that would have been spent on durable goods will now be diverted to the purchase of more "soft" goods, offsetting the effect of credit curbs and allocations.

At any rate, department store sales are still at high levels. During the week ended October 14 they were 11 percent greater than a year ago—an impressive showing in view of the abnormally heavy anticipatory buying that preceded imposition of installment credit curbs. And there is ground for concluding that sales will remain high for the rest of this year, although the emphasis will be on nondurable goods. The country is in the midst of a business boom that has brought industrial production close to the peak elevation of World War II. About four million people have been added to the working force since last February; labor shortages are beginning to show up; average factory wages are at record heights ($5 a week more than a year ago); dividend payments are higher; and total personal income is currently running at an annual rate of 223.4 billion dollars compared with a 1949 annual rate of 206 billion dollars. As Government defense buying expands, moreover, bigger Federal deficits will put more money in consumer hands and, unless the public's spending habits change radically, the result will be increased demands for consumer goods.

Under such conditions there is no reason to fear that the new credit curbs will lead to a business recession. On the contrary, the real danger is that rising personal incomes will result in an increase of consumer spending that will necessitate imposition of wage and price ceilings. All businessmen, whether manufacturers, wholesalers or retailers, have good cause to be concerned about the effect on their sales and profits of such controls. But for the present the general business outlook seems highly favorable.

Connie Mack

Well, everybody understood, no doubt, that even Connie Mack couldn't go on forever. The great marvel—and one that will probably never be repeated—is that he could have kept up the pace until he was well within the shadow of his ninetieth year. But somehow, with Connie Mack and his score card gone for good from the American League dugouts, it will hardly seem the same game, for he has been part of it for longer than most persons now living can remember.

The saddest part of it is that his retirement as the manager of the club with which his name has been associated for half a century was evidently not altogether a matter of volition. "I am quitting," he said, "not because I am too old, but because I think the people want me to." It was said, however, without bitterness, for Connie Mack had been too long in baseball not to know that sentiment is no substitute for success. The club had been faring badly in a financial way, playing a large part of its schedule before naked stands. There were conflicts over policy among the business management and even within Connie Mack's own household.

All this was not necessarily because he was losing his cunning or because age had weakened the instincts that had made him so keen a judge of potential prowess or because his much-advertised mildness had infected the players, depriving them of aggressiveness. He had wanted very dearly to continue until he had put together another set of champions. For almost 20 years after the dismantling of his championship club of 1929-30, his admirers were confident that he could do it. If he failed, it was because the game he had helped to make respectable and to transform into an important industry had outgrown his resources. Baseball promotion had become a sport for millionaires.

It was very different back in the early eighties when Slats McGillicuddy entered upon his long career. The players of those days were a tough, hard-bitten set, as were most of those who paid money to watch them. Young McGillicuddy was a catcher in the days when catchers had almost nothing in the way of protective apparatus except a tight-fitting kid glove with the fingers cut out. For the first two strikes they caught the ball on its first bounce; for the third they came directly behind the bat; and broken ribs or broken fingers from glancing fouls were all in the day's work, like the fighting behind the grandstand when the game was over.

But Connie Mack's playing days had been ended when the American League was organized in 1900, and he was never again seen in uniform, although he would occasionally wear a uniform cap. (The reason for this doubtless was that the baseball costume ill became his long gaunt splinter-like figure.) He won his first league championship in 1902, with a set of players whose names have long been legend, among them Waddell, Bender, Eddie Plank, Ossie Schreck, Doc Powers, Frank Davis, Monty Cross and Topsy Hartsell. It was with virtually the same club that he won another championship in 1905, only to be defeated by the Giants in the World Series. By 1911 when he won another he had acquired the famous "hundred-thousand-dollar infield" of McInnis, Collins, Barry and Baker. They took three world's championships in a row—one from the Cubs and two from the Giants—and in the next year were ignominiously beaten in four straight games by the Boston Braves. By that time, however, Philadelphia was tired even of championships, and Connie Mack sold off his stars. It took him 15 years to find another set.

Lieut. Gilbert's Offense

Misbehavior before the enemy and disobedience of the command of a superior officer in battle are two of the most serious offenses in the Articles of War. Both are punishable by death. It is regrettable that in the widespread discussion of the death sentence imposed upon First Lieut. Leon A. Gilbert for misbehavior in Korea, so little attention has been given to the severity of the offense itself. It is more regrettable that certain elements, abetted by the Communists, are trying to whip up a charge of race prejudice because Lieutenant Gilbert happens to be a Negro. The extensive actions involving Negro troops in Korea, and the distinguished service they rendered in many instances, ought to discredit any such efforts.

Lieutenant Gilbert was convicted by a court-martial after he had refused to obey the orders of a colonel and a major to take a patrol back up a hill in the face of what he considered certain death. It may be that the order was unreasonable; Lieutenant Gilbert subsequently asserted that he was given no chance to explain why he thought the command could not be carried out. But there are many necessary sacrifice actions in war, and Lieutenant Gilbert could not have known, in the larger plan, how many other lives depended upon cover by his unit.

As a practical fact, there is extremely slight possibility that the sentence will be carried out as imposed. Only one American soldier has been executed for a purely military offense since the Civil War; this occurred in the European theater during World War II after repeated desertions before the enemy. Although many charges of misbehavior before the enemy have been brought and a number of death sentences decreed, the almost invariable practice has been for higher authority to commute these sentences to imprisonment. After a death sentence is voted by a court-martial, it must be approved or disapproved by the division commander, after which it goes to the Judge Advocate General for study by a board of review and the judicial council. After this, if sustained, it goes through the Secretary of the Army to the President. This elaborate review procedure is established to insure that all extenuating circumstances will be taken into account and that unduly harsh sentences adjudged during combat conditions will be subjected to dispassionate scrutiny.

Very probably a full review of the circumstances in this case will bring a commutation of the sentence. But there can be no reasonable doubt, it seems to us, of the necessity for applying stringent standards of conduct in combat. Combat is by its very nature brutal, and as a corollary military discipline is necessarily autocratic. There can be no room for argument when the life of every soldier may depend upon the proper performance of another soldier, especially an officer chosen as a leader. It is not at all surprising that a court composed of men themselves continually facing death should be severe in its judgment of a man who, for whatever reason, failed his responsibility.

Planned Brutality

The horror tale told by the three American prisoners who escaped from their North Korean captors after a march of 160 miles from Seoul to Pyongyang follows a familiar pattern. During World War II Americans became too well acquainted with the beating, starvation, and murder of prisoners on the march. Although allowance has to be made for the inevitable casualties resulting from forced marches of this kind, the testimony of the rescued trio leaves no room for doubt that the Americans participating in the march were the victims of planned atrocities. The massacre of 68 American prisoners near the Sunchon railway tunnel adds further horrible evidence of this calculated brutality.

It is this deliberate mistreatment of prisoners as a matter of policy, not isolated instances of brutality, that shock the sensibilities of the civilized world. And it is the North Korean officials and officers responsible for the conduct of the war, not the underlings who carry out their orders, who should be hunted down and punished for their inhuman crimes. For if we learned anything from the experience of World War II, it is that the people of an entire nation—in this case part of a nation—cannot justifiably be indicted for the crimes of their political heads and military leaders.

Color Television

I think once and for all the public should get the notion out of their mind that the CBS color system would make their sets obsolete. I do not believe that the public will be fooled by the term "compatible," which is used to mean that "you may receive black and white pictures on your screen while being televised by only color cameras without any adjustment whatsoever."

This is all very well as long as you are interested in black and white reception only, but in the event color reception is desired, then the picture changes completely. The price of an electronic converter does not even approach the economy of a mechanical converter. The CBS color method was made purposely noncompatible to achieve better results in receiving color transmission.

As for compatibility, how "compatible" are 45 RPM records, with the standard speed record changer, which is found in the most expensive consoles? The mechanical operation of these changers has always been taken for granted.

Many people were of the opinion that their sets would become obsolete immediately in the event of the adoption of the CBS color system. It has not been made clear that the number of color programs to be presented will depend on the number of persons interested to the extent of having their sets converted to color. The color wheel is an inexpensive way of converting existing sets to receive excellent color.

Many manufacturers realize this, and this may be one of the reasons for such bitter opposition. Some persons, without having seen CBS color, will say that they do not like it because of the mechanical wheel; but they fail to realize that this is done for economy only and that it will work on the electronic tricolored tube as well as, if not better than other systems.

Degradation of pictures? Anyone who witnessed the CBS color demonstrations last February cannot say that the picture quality or color fidelity was poor. The color picture appeared better than most receivers of today, which seldom make use of the 4MC bandpass requirements, and with their horizontal geometric resolution increased, even greater results are expected. "It's just like Technicolor movies, only better."

Praise For The Post

As I look over the pages of The Washington Post of October 13, I see so much that is worthy of high praise it is difficult to single out the particular editorial, news story, or letter to the editor which seems to excel. As to the editorials, the one entitled "United Nations 'Plot'" really rings the bull's-eye. Of the news stories, those on the Williams case and the one on the Bailey case in the Supreme Court, are most outstanding. I do not mean just as to the stories, but also as to the extent of coverage. As to the letters to the editor, the one by Harold Ickes is especially noteworthy.

But over and above all other contents of this particular issue of The Post is the letter entitled, "Loving The World," by Donald M. Dozier. Perhaps if the police and others who prosecuted Williams; and if the members of the "investigating" board who caused the dismissal of Dorothy Bailey; and if Senator McCarran who, according to the charges of Mr. Ickes, has disgraced the high office that he occupies by his alleged misconduct toward the Paiute Indians, had ever felt "the soul-cleansing influence" of the simple phrase, "I love everybody in the whole wide world," as reported coming from this small child, none of these injustices would have taken place.

Again, I say: Congratulations to the people of these United States for the alert and courageous Washington Post which, while bearing at its masthead no high sounding phrase by way of motto, seems so definitely to have caught the vision pictured by Edwin Markham in his poem entitled, "World Purpose," one stanza of which is:

"Forever the Great Purpose presses on,
From darkness unto darkness, dawn to dawn,
Resolved to lay the rafter and the beam
Of Justice—the imperishable dream."

"The Woolly Pandit"

Your shocking editorial of October 18, "The Woolly Pandit" must fill every thinking American with disappointment and shame. At the first sign of disagreement on Pandit Nehru's part with the narrow views of this scrivener, he rushes into print with the astounding overnight discovery that "Faith in the world statesmanship of Pandit Nehru at this critical moment in international affairs is fast crumbling."

Because Nehru objects to carrying the war in Korea beyond the thirty-eighth parallel, should your great paper resort to the childish experiment of name-calling and face-making? Is it not possible that he may be right?

We are still thinking and acting within the imperialistic framework of Europe, when by all the rules of normal expectation, we should be heartily in sympathy with the revolution in Asia. Have we forgotten our own revolution and the fact that we are a revolutionary people?

"Sayers Of 'Yea'"

I read with great interest your most excellent editorial of October 16, "Sayers of 'Yea'," showing up the mockery of democracy in the recent election in East Germany.

Recently I used the Library of Congress, to me the most valuable institution in your interesting city, to read much of what Stalin has written on various subjects, among which was his method of holding an election. He says in his report to the eighth Congress of Soviets (November 25, 1936):

"In the USSR there are only two classes, workers and peasants, whose interests are not only not mutually hostile, but, on the contrary, are friendly. Consequently, in the USSR, there is no ground for the existence of several parties, and, consequently, for freedom for these parties. In the USSR there is ground only for one party, the Communist Party. In the USSR only one party can exist, the Communist Party, which courageously defends the interests of the workers and peasants to the very end."

After reading much of what Stalin had to say, I came to the very definite conclusion that there can be no compromise with him. To give another example, Stalin said, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the October revolution: "The October revolution is not merely a revolution 'within national limits.' It is primarily, a revolution of an international, world order; for it signifies a radical turn from the old, capitalist, world to the new, Socialist World . . . the October revolution is a revolution of an international, world order."

Stalin continues: "Let us hope that by forming our confederate republic we shall be creating a reliable bulwark against international capitalism and that the new confederate state will be another decisive step towards the amalgamation of the toilers of the whole world into a single World Socialist Soviet Republic."

Stalin makes it plain that he means to overthrow the government of every free nation in the entire world. What kind of economic system does he propose to establish? I will let Stalin answer for himself, without comment. He says, in the application of his system as to Russia:

"The landlord class, as you know, has been eliminated as a result of the victorious conclusion of the civil war. As for the other exploiting classes, they have shared the fate of the landlord class. The capitalist class in the sphere of industry has ceased to exist. The kulak class in the sphere of agriculture has ceased to exist. And the merchants and profiteers in the sphere of trade have ceased to exist. . . The Soviet government expropriated the capitalist class, took away their banks, factories, railways and other implements and means of production, and declared them to be socialist property and placed at the head of these enterprises the best members of the working classes."

Russian History

Mr. Vishinsky is alleged to have said that it will be a long time before anyone can make the Soviet Union shake in its boots. Says he, "Look at Russian history."

That is good advice. I have always been interested in Russian history. I have always come to the same conclusion and that is, that it has been the long hard winters which have defeated the Russian foes rather than any special prowess on the part of the Russians themselves. They have gotten used to being impregnable in the long winter time.

The Russian leaders had better study Russian history! They had better realize that these long, hard winters no longer form an impregnable wall around the Soviets. Are they being brave and fearless or are they being cocksure due to long-time protection by their climate? The atom bomb laughs at temperature and distance. Russia now has a soft belly all the year round and it will be well for her to take note of it for her own good.

Needling Of Truman

I hope President Truman will find consolation in the small-minded needling in which so many of the newspapers and commentators are indulging.

In no other country would people be allowed to try to destroy the character of their public officials. In time of war when the heads of the Government should be free to use every ounce of energy and brain power to combat the enemy abroad, they have to combat a most formidable enemy at home.

The scandal-mongers and political hypocrites are enemies of all of us. The scandal-mongers killed Wilson, they broke Coolidge's health and they stole many years from Roosevelt and are still trying to bury him deeper. Now it is Truman. May God bless our President and keep him strong in mind and body and direct him in the manner to govern our country.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Taft At The Hustings

VERSAILLES, Ohio.—The energy and endurance displayed by the 62-year-old Senator Robert A. Taft in his campaign for reelection must be seen to be believed. The hour Taft spent in this small, pleasant, rural town in southwestern Ohio gives some idea of the sort of campaign Taft is waging, all day, every day.

The first thing you see as you enter the town is a large truck, patriotically draped in red, white and blue, drawn up in front of the main square. Gathered around the truck are perhaps 250 people: students from the local schools, looking self-consciously serious; the high school band, magnificent in scarlet costumes; local businessmen (many of whom look as though they might be the candidate's brother), and their wives; well-fed farmers from the flat, rich land round about.

As Taft appears, in the back seat of the open, light-blue limousine of a local Republican bigwig, there is a little whisper of interest and some desultory clapping. There is nothing in the scene to suggest that great issues depend on the fate of this particular candidate—the future course of the Republican Party, the direction of American foreign policy, the success or failure of the Truman Administration's alliance with organized labor, perhaps even the identity of the next President.

THE SCENE suggests, instead, a cheerful Sunday school outing, presided over by a rather irascible schoolmaster. Here, as in the United States Senate, there is between Senator Taft and his audience something of the relationship between teacher and taught. Taft mounts the truck, removes the wilted grey felt hat which appears to have been worn, and sat on, by generations of Tafts, and looks about him. You get the feeling that he is not going to take any nonsense from his pupils. Then Taft smiles.

It is the charming smile of an essentially shy man who does not smile easily. But it is the last smile his audience gets. There are no jokes, no casual chitchat in the speech which follows. It is a formal set speech, and a long one—too long, indeed, for a standing audience, and there are signs of restlessness before it ends. Yet on the whole, the people of Versailles listen attentively.

Senator Taft is no great shakes as an orator. But an audience will always listen to an angry man, and Senator Taft is clearly a very angry man indeed. When he has finished, there is certainly no wild excitement, but there is obvious sympathy and even some enthusiasm. With a rather limp hand, Taft acknowledges the clapping, and he is off to make much the same speech all over again, in the tiny town of Russia, some miles away.

For ten weeks now, this scene has been repeated with minor variations, nine or ten times a day. With November 7 looming near, Taft is now making as many as 14 speeches in a single day, exhausting whole platoons of assistants and reporters. And the astonishing energy of Taft's campaign—for which even his enemies admire him—has its significance. For Taft is "running scared."

There is one thing on which Taft and his mortal enemies, the labor leaders, agree. To balance the anti-Taft majority in the industrial centers, Taft must hold close to 60 percent of the predominantly Republican rural vote—and above all, the rural voters must be persuaded to go to the polls. This explains why Taft plans to campaign in every crossroad's hamlet in Ohio before election day.

NO ONE IN OHIO is making any predictions about the outcome of this election—the most crucial off-year election in many years. But one of Taft's major hurdles is physically evident to the senses in this part of southwestern Ohio.

For here in this flat fertile land you can see—you can almost smell—prosperity. By all the rules, this is Republican territory, here where almost no one is very rich and almost no one is very poor and almost everyone is reasonably comfortable. But equally by all the rules, when people are satisfied with things as they are, they are not willing to go to very much trouble to kick the rascals out—the rascals in this case being the Truman Administration.

This in turn explains Taft's campaign strategy, as revealed in the speeches he has been making in hundreds of towns like Versailles. For Taft concentrates not on the prosperous present, but on an awful vision of what the future will hold if the Truman Administration is not confronted by "an independent Congress."

This vision of the future sees the British version of socialism triumphant in the United States, and Russian communism triumphant everywhere else. The United States will be shackled with socialism because Harry Truman has become the captive of the CIO-PAC, and communism will be allowed to triumph elsewhere in the world because the Administration has repeatedly demonstrated a "strange sympathy for communism"—as demonstrated by the fall of China, the "invitation" to attack in Korea, the "whitewash" of the McCarthy charges, the Hiss episode, and the Truman veto of the anti-Communist bill.

November 7 will show whether this is effective strategy. But it must be said that this vision of the future—a Socialist America in a vast Communist sea—is somehow a little unreal in the atmosphere of friendly comfort which pervades the main square of Versailles, Ohio, as it basks in the gentle autumn sun.

The Schuman Plan

By Maurice Duverger

(Mr. Duverger is a special writer for Le Monde of Paris.)

I: A Method Of Building Europe

THE SCHUMAN Plan cannot be fully understood if considered only from the technical point of view, as a particular solution to the particular problem of coal and steel. In the final analysis the Schuman Plan is a method of constructing a new Europe.

To be sure progress has already been made in this field, with the creation of special organizations, such as the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, the European Payments Union and the organizations for military coordination, as well as with the setting up of an over-all political structure, the Council of Europe.

But these accomplishments are not enough. These specialized organizations function well, but in an all too narrow field of action. The Council of Europe also has served a useful purpose in gathering together national legislators and statesmen; but it has not yet succeeded in bringing about the adoption of a single concrete measure. It is the prisoner both of its consultative role and of the Committee of Ministers.

The authors of the Schuman Plan recognize the importance of the work that has been already achieved. Their plan is not an offensive weapon launched against the OEEC or the Council of Strasbourg—but a supporting weapon fighting on the same side. However, they consider that this weapon is infinitely more efficient than any previously available, because it has within it the capacity to overcome the two principal obstacles to a European federation—the sensitivities of national states and the historic antagonism between France and Germany.

THE PLAN'S most original contribution to the problem of constructing Europe is a change in the angle of approach. Up to the present the battle has always been begun on the traditional ground of state prerogatives; whether the problem concerned customs regulations, the control of international payments, military cooperation or the political questions which were debated at Strasbourg, one encountered directly government bodies, national sovereignties, the "hunting preserves" of the state.

In contrast to this, the authors of the plan join the battle largely on private terrain. To be sure, the national states are involved, but in an indirect and roundabout way; the infringement on their national sovereignties is less obvious. The plan contemplates the abolition of customs duties, but only for some items, which leaves the customs power generally intact. It will bring about the prevention of particular discriminatory measures and prescribe particular reforms; but this affects only a narrow field, and does not challenge the principle of the general prerogatives of national governments. That the national governments are still free is shown by the fact that they retain the free choice of whether or not to nationalize their coal and steel industries, since such a decision does not affect the pooling of production which the plan envisages.

In reality the authors of the plan are less interested in substituting a new authority for that of the national governments in the area of functions which those governments already exercise than in filling a vacuum which national authority neglects. Instead of building Europe on grounds already occupied by national governmental structures, which would require tearing down part of them to make room, the Schuman Plan lays the foundations of a common structure on ground almost untouched.

Its audacity is only superficially less, however, for its authors have in mind that, once the European edifice is built, the national states will progressively abandon their prerogatives for its benefit. Yet, instead of attacking the national sovereignties head-on, they attack them obliquely, which accounts for their less strenuous resistance. They thus partially avoid the first obstacle on the path toward a federated Europe.

HOWEVER, they do meet the second obstacle head-on. Knowing full well that the Franco-German conflict stands in the way of any European union, that Franco-German rivalry has generated two wars from which the old world nearly died, they establish the rapprochement of France and Germany as the cornerstone of their edifice. Some observers were shocked that the Bonn government was the first to be informed of the French plan; nothing was more natural.

France is torn, deep within herself, by the two contradictory feelings: the fear of Russia and the fear of Germany. Those who look toward the future are especially sensitive to the first danger, which can be averted only by a union of all European states, and the creation of a powerful federal army; this, in turn, is not conceivable without German participation.

Those who look to the past think mainly of the second danger, which implies the disarming of Germany and the limitation of its steel industries, which opens western Europe to a Russian invasion and condemns it to a low standard of living, sterilizing one of its principal industrial centers. The merit of the Schuman Plan is that it offers a way of escape from this dilemma, for it put the German metallurgic industry at the service of the whole European community, and no longer at the service of the German state with its eventual thoughts of hegemony.

ONCE the plan is in effect and the high authority established, the plants of the Ruhr can no longer work secretly to rebuild a German war machine; operating under the control of a European organization, they will no longer be subject to the control of the German state. If they must again manufacture arms, they will undertake that manufacture with the agreement of and under the surveillance of Europe for the equipment of federal armed forces to protect the whole of the Western world against the risk of a Russian invasion.

The great merit of the Schuman Plan is to render technically impossible the rebirth of a German military menace and permanently to remove French apprehensions on this score by creating the requisite conditions for a close alliance of these two great continental countries.

It is easy to see why the proposal of the Schuman Plan has already changed the atmosphere of Franco-German relations. The rapprochement of France and Germany is the most important diplomatic fact of the summer of 1950. It is essentially the result of the Schuman proposal and of the first meetings of the Paris Conference. Certainly, many misunderstandings remain to be ironed out, and many touchy questions to be tactfully dealt with. But the first step which is always the most decisive, has now been taken.

Walter Lippmann is in Europe. His column, "Today and Tomorrow," will be resumed upon his return in December.

FCC Row Delays Purchase Of Transmitter For Defense

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Purchase of the District's civil defense headquarters radio transmitter is being held up because of a disagreement with the Federal Communications Commission over what radio frequencies are to be used.

Acting Civil Defense Director John E. Fondahl said yesterday that specifications have been drawn and the District is ready to take bids. But he said Herbert A. Friede, D. C. communications chief who is handling the purchase, can't determine exactly what equipment to buy without knowing what the frequency is to be.

The FCC's chief engineer, Curtis B. Plummer, said that the trouble arises from the District's request for a "special emergency" frequency, usually reserved for non-recurring use. FCC has suggested that civil defense broadcasting be on what are known as "disaster service" frequencies. One conference has not ironed out the differences of opinion and Plummer said he had no idea when a solution would be found.

One reason for the difficulty is the confusion at the National Security Resources Board which has been handling civil defense for the Federal Government. Two months ago President Truman announced he was about to set up by executive order a Civil Defense Administration but no order has been signed, reportedly because nobody can be found who will take the tough job of heading the agency.

FCC has been waiting for NSRB to submit a general plan covering various radio and other communications matters in civil defense.

Fondahl said the District's $100,000 fund, voted by Congress, will permit purchase of two transmitters to be installed in the basement of the National Guard Armory. One would have a booster to give it strength enough to broadcast at least 50 miles, a big enough radius to cover the entire metropolitan area.

Currently there are no plans for an alternate command post, chiefly because there is no money.

The Armory site is about 1¾ miles due east of the Capitol, a prime enemy target. A direct hit on the Capitol, according to Atomic Energy Commission calculations based on the Japanese A-bombings, would put the armory within the "severe flash burns" area as well as within the "partial blast damage" zone. A near miss to the east would cover the Armory with deadly radiation and completely collapse it.

The civil defense offices now are on the balcony floor, with windows facing toward the Capitol. However, the radio equipment and office space available in case of an alert will be in the basement. But these rooms have windows below ground level which will require protection by erection of two-feet-thick cement baffle walls or similar devices.

Fondahl said next month's area civil defense meeting here will consider whether command posts in Maryland and Virginia should have strong enough transmitters to act as alternates to that at the Armory. Cost of such a single transmitter with a booster to cover the metropolitan area is around $15,000.

Monitoring sets permanently tuned in on the civil defense frequencies cost about $250 each.

As things stand now, the District is expected to alert Washington and the nearby Maryland counties if an alert is phoned in by the Air Force. The adjoining Virginia counties are to be alerted from Winchester, Va., however.

Small Business Gets 74% of Army Orders

The Army said yesterday it is giving small business orders for much of its needs in Korea.

Secretary Frank Pace reported that during July, first month of the war, small-business concerns received more than 33 million dollars in orders.

For the fiscal year which ended last June 30, the Army placed with small concerns 746,000 contracts valued at 800 million dollars, Pace reported. He said this was 74.1 percent of the contracts and 40.6 percent of the total dollar value of contracts placed with large and small firms.

Time And Tide Halt Sailboat Trip From R. I. To Florida

The bright yellow sail on Zenta, a 20-foot converted Danish whaleboat, is boldly emblazoned, "R. I. to Florida," but the voyage ended yesterday in the Potomac River, off Alexandria.

Two young men set out from Wickford, R. I., on September 2 to sail down the inland waterway to Jacksonville, Fla., but were forced to give up about 20 miles north of Norfolk when "our time ran out."

"I wanted to try to get back to George Washington University," Marvin Stephens, 24, of 4533 N. 32nd st., Arlington, explained yesterday. Bud Ward, skipper of the boat, said he must return quickly to his Gainesville, Fla., home.

The two men on the 38-year-old boat reached Alexandria Saturday and gratefully accepted a tow to the Corinthian Yacht Club at Buzzard Point on the Anacostia River, where they tied up for the night.

To Sail Back to Alexandria

Yesterday they planned to sail the boat back to Alexandria, where it will be docked for the time being, under Stephens' care.

The seven-week, 800-mile voyage was marred by a broken topmast, a hurricane, and "too-many" headwinds. At one time the craft was blown 30 miles out into the Atlantic, Stephens recalled.

They accepted several tows when beset by calms but "we got back at them last Saturday night," Stephens said.

He told of seeing an SOS flashed in the Bay off Colonial Beach. They responded to the call for help and found a 19-foot motorboat stalled in the choppy water.

"At first they couldn't believe they saw a boat," Stephens said, "because they couldn't hear a motor." "We towed them in anyway and they were so grateful they let us use their house for three days," he said.

Got Boat in Greenland

Ward said he obtained the boat in Greenland by trading an outboard motor to a Dane who had planned to sail the whaleboat to the United States but was forced to return to Denmark.

He said he arranged to have the boat transported to Rhode Island on a big ship in a trade which involved "walrus head, complete with tusks."

Stephens and Ward went to Rhode Island in August to prepare the boat for the trip. It was completely open, they said, and they put in the deck and cabin.

Ward helped pay their way by giving lectures and showing movies of some of his experiences in Alaska, Greenland and the Arctic.

3 Senators Want Lobby Data

Three Democratic Senators joined yesterday in a demand for "full information" on spending by corporations to influence legislation and politics.

Senators Elbert D. Thomas (Utah), Murray (Mont.) and Green (R.I.) based their stand on the results of a partial survey by the Buchanan Lobbying Committee in the House, made public Saturday night. They said that study "reveals the startling fact that America's leading corporations are spending millions of dollars of the stockholders' money for political propaganda."

The statement listed these concerns "which defied the committee by refusing to give any pertinent information."

21 Escape as Korean Reds Massacre 68 American Prisoners

slaughter. A South Korean officer and a civilian led us to the tunnel.

After a reconnaissance, the South Korean officer reported he had found seven bodies inside.

We walked up the hill and through the tunnel until we came to the bodies. The seven were laid on crude native mats beside the track. Obviously they were victims of starvation. The flesh had wasted from their bodies. The skin was drawn tight on their arms, legs and over their ribs. Their faces were bony masks.

There was no sign they had been shot recently, although some of them had been wounded, probably in battle.

There were no identification tags or marks on them. All we found in their pockets was a handful of hard, dry crackers.

Two of the youths were huddled as though for warmth. One had his arms protectively about the other. Beards were heavy on their faces. Four of them were barefoot.

For a few moments, we believed these seven dead were all there were.

Then a South Korean soldier came running into the tunnel, crying he had seen five Americans on a ridge above the tunnel.

We ran outside and General Allen shouted for the Americans to come down—that now they were safe.

We walked along the tracks, and out of the underbrush came a gaunt, trembling figure whose face was filled with fear. He was Pfc. Vallor John of Milwaukee. I ran up to him and he threw his arms about my neck and burst into tears.

"Oh, thank God!" he gasped. "Thank God! We've been waiting for you guys so long."

I gave him a cigarette and asked him what had happened.

"They shot us all," he gasped. "They took us off the train. They said we were going to eat chow in a Korean house. Then they set us down and began shooting."

John hung his head and sobbed, "I played dead and I heard them shooting all around."

Then he pointed to a gully a few feet away.

"They are in there."

We walked into the dim shadows of the little ravine—into a scene of horror. The thin bodies of 17 men sprawled on the ground.

For a moment in the shadows it seemed no one was alive. Then I saw a youth looking up at me. He was propped against the bank among the dead, weak and pale. His eyes were trying to smile. He was Corpl. Dale Blake, of Hutchinson, Minn.

He said, "Oh, God, so glad you came." Tears coursed down his cheeks. "I didn't think anybody would ever find us."

Then a weak voice came from the bank above us. Through the weeds crawled Private Ray Hanchey of Wallace, N. C. He had a leg wound but was not seriously hurt. He told the same story as the others. They had been taken out of the train about 6 p. m. Friday to supper—and were shot.

We made them as comfortable as possible and started out to look for other survivors. Across the field I saw other bodies. They were lying in the cornfield. The wind rustled the dry stalks about them. There were 15 dead in this group.

From their postures, they had been sitting in the cornfield in a circle waiting with their bowls for their food when the Reds opened fire. Blood was still wet on their clothing. Their bodies had the same starved appearance as the others.

Just then General Allen yelled from a ridge top that he had found some other survivors. Tucker and I started toward the ridge, when out of the bushes came Pvt. John Martin of Ferndale, Mich., Melvin Rookstool of Nyssa, Oreg., and Eugene Jones of Herrin, Ill.

Martin and Rookstool were helping Jones, who was the weakest. They stumbled across the plowed field. Like scarecrows, their clothing hung to their thin frames.

Jones saw us and cried: "Look, Americans! They're Americans!" Then he fell to the ground.

On the ridgetop, General Allen sat with six other surviving GIs. The general's eyes were wet.

"It is a great day, boys," he kept repeating. "I just wish we could have been here soon enough to save the others."

The prisoners had been captured late in July and early in August on the southern Korean battlefront. They were taken to Seoul. Three days after the United States Marines landed at Inchon on September 15, the Reds began marching the prisoners north to the Red capital, Pyongyang.

On this long march, many Americans died. When they were too weak to keep up, they were short or clubbed to death. The Americans buried their own dead along the way.

Finally they reached Pyongyang. When that city was threatened the prisoners were ordered moved. About 150 were put on one train and another 150 on a second train headed north toward the Manchurian border. The men we found had been on the second train. Whereabouts of the first trainload is unknown.

The second train of boxcars reached the Sunchon tunnel Friday morning and all day it stood in the tunnel, hiding from American planes.

At dusk, the Red guards told the men they were being taken outside for their evening meal.

They were led into the fields, seated, and shot.

The survivors were taken from Sunchon to Pyongyang and flown to Japan.

Here are their names:

Washington Post Site May Be Parking Lot

The property at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., where The Washington Post currently is published, will become a parking lot unless the Federal Government wants it for office space.

William B. Willard, a trustee of the Willard estate, which owns all but 20 feet of the property, said last night that a lease has been arranged to turn the site into a parking lot. He added, however, that if the Government desires the building for office space, the parking lot deal would be voided. Such a provision is contained in a lease negotiated with the parking interests, he said.

Willard also said that the estate has agreed to purchase from The Washington Post the easternmost 20 feet of the existing building. The Post has leased from the estate the other 65 feet of the property.

Arrangements to sell the 20 feet of the building owned by The Post were completed several months ago.

Willard said that a real estate broker has offered the building to the Government for office space.

The Washington Post soon will move to a new building at 1515 L st. nw.

Cards Get 38 in 1st Half, Hand Redskins 4th Loss, 38-28; Giants Again Humble Mighty Cleveland Browns, 17-13

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

GRIFFITH STADIUM, Oct. 22.—The Chicago Cardinals are first on the field. It is the only courtesy they will get from the Redskins, who don't like the one thing they have in common with the Cardinals—neither team has beaten anybody but the Baltimore Colts this season.

The Redskins have lured their biggest crowd of the season to the ball yard, 27,856, and the eyes of taxes are upon them. Mr. George Schoeneman, boss Collector of the Internal Revenue, has just moved into his box seat.

Povich

Charlie Justice is in the Redskins' starting lineup, and he doesn't have to gain a yard to be an asset. The estimate is that he pulled at least 5000 customers into the park with him at $3.60.

The game is 3 minutes old, and the Redskins are 7 points behind. Frank Tripucka just threw a 38-yard pass to Francis Polsfoot that put the ball on the Redskins 2, and from there Elmer Angsman barreled it over. The Cardinals are not acting like the team that blew a 31-7 exhibition game to the Redskins at Denver.

CORRECTION: Yes they are. Denote the passage of 31 seconds any way you like, but the Redskins just got the tying touchdown. Hall Haynes, the Redskins' kickoff specialist with the two back names, made a lot of headway with the booted ball and took it 61 yards to the Cards' 34. A bit later Gilmer found Bones Taylor crying for the ball in the end zone and appeased him with a touchdown pass.

10-7, Cardinals. Tripucka, heaved for a 15-yard loss by Ed Berrang on an attempt to get a pass away, called on Pat Harder to kick a field goal. Obeying orders, Harder booted it home from the 32-yard line.

Justice takes the next kickoff 20 yards to the Redskins' 30 where he is solidly whacked into by Mr. Tom Wham, the wonderfully-named Cardinal end from Furman, S. C. Justice re-assembles himself and gets off the ground, and what the gentleman from North Carolina is saying to the gentleman from South Carolina will not be quoted in this family newspaper.

Gilmer aims a long pass at Justice and it is intercepted by Don Paul. Justice winds up making the tackle, and can be excused from wondering if he is a new one-man, two-platoon system all by himself.

WELL: The Redskins started off making the play, and the Cardinals just finished it. Sammy Baugh tried a pitch-out to Bill Dudley at left end, but Tom Wham smelled out the play so smartly he wound up with the ball, and 40 yards later he wound up with a Cardinal touchdown.

Hall Haynes takes the next kickoff for the Redskins and hands it off to Justice. It was a trick play, all right. The Redskins were still giving Haynes tremendous downfield blocking when Mike Swistowicz stopped Justice on the Redskins' 10.

The Redskins' drive to the Cardinals' 34 before giving up the ball. Harry Gilmer who faked a handoff to Justice into the middle of the line, then committed two balks, and got off a 33-yard heave to Taylor, and it's now 17-14, Cardinals.

Make that 24-14, Cardinals. Tripucka just located one of his ends, Bob Shaw, lonely as a leper near the sidelines, and it was a 64-yard pass play. Pete Stout caught up with Shaw on the 15-yard line and took a stiff hand to the chin but got up without a count.

BILL DUDLEY barely gets his finger tips on a 57-yard punt by Tripucka and fumbles the ball with Bill Blackburn recovering for the Cardinals on the Redskins' 10. Dudley's muff was excusable. He didn't presume anybody could kick a ball that far.

Touchdown, Cardinals. Charley Trippi scampers through right tackle for the last 8 yards, knocking down two Redskins and faking three more out of his way. On that run, the guy was acting as if he were really trying to make the team.

Touchdown, Cardinals. It's beginning to sound like a stuck record, I know. But Frank Polsfoot just out-faked Dowda, took a pass from Tripucka, and then out-ran Dowda for the rest of the 63 yards to the goal line, and it's 38-14, Cardinals.

Gilmer aims a long pass at Taylor, and winds up playing safetyman for the Redskins. He hauls down Don Paul of the Cardinals who took his pass 40 yards to midfield.

THE REDSKINS are looking better. In fact, they're playing better. Gilmer found a new target in Justice, and he scampered to a first down on the Cardinals' 6 with an over-the-middle pass. Goode bumped it over from there in three tries, and it's 38-21.

And if the Cardinals aren't worried, they ought to be, because the Redskins just came up with another touchdown. Gilmer sent them on their way with a 20-yard dash after being trapped, and then he launched a 45-yard pitch to Taylor that took it all the way, and it's 38-28.

The Cardinals aren't worried any longer. They still have their 10-point lead, they have the ball, and they have a good look at the clock which shows only 1 minute to play. At this point, you have to like their chances despite the second-half beating they've been taking from the Redskins, who are losing game and making friends on the same afternoon.

New York Comes From Behind to Tie for Lead

By Murray Rose

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP).—The New York Giants handed Cleveland a touchdown on a boner play and then came from behind in the second half to upset the favored Browns, 17-13, in a fiercely played National Football League game before 41,734 fans.

Fists flew as tempers were short throughout the Polo Grounds grudge battle. The Giants also upset the Browns at Cleveland earlier this season, 6-0.

In winning, the Giants displaced Cleveland as leader in the NFL American Conference. New York now is tied for first with Philadelphia, 17-10 victor over the Pittsburgh Steelers. Both have 4-1 records. Cleveland is 4-2 in third.

The victory marks the first time Cleveland ever has lost twice in one season to the same club.

Two Players Banished

Penalties were a dime a dozen and a player from each side—Cleveland's Derrell Palmer and New York's Al Derogatis—were tossed out for unnecessary roughness.

Palmer's penalty paved the way for the Giants' first touchdown in the third quarter and a fumble set up the winning score in the last quarter.

With Cleveland a 14-point favorite and leading 13-10, Rex Bumgardner, Brown back, fumbled and New York's Tom Landry recovered on the Cleveland 19.

Joe Scott, hard-driving back from San Francisco, set the pace and the Giants ripped right through the crumbling Cleveland line to tally the winning score in the middle of the final period. Scott drove over left tackle from the two for the score.

The boner that almost ruined the Giants, occurred in the final seconds of the second quarter. The Browns had just gone ahead, 6-3, on Big Lou Groza's second 17-yard field goal of the quarter. Ray Poole, a great end all day, had put the New Yorkers in front, 3-0, with a 33-yard field goal in the opening period.

Ostendarp Pulls Boner

Groza's second three-pointer was counted with 16 seconds to go in the first half. Then Groza kicked off and New York's Jim Ostendarp pulled his "skull."

The kickoff bounded over his head and he chased it to the one but did not drop on it. Cleveland's Ken Carpenter, alert to the occasion, fell on the ball on the Giants' one. Ostendarp apparently forgot that the ball is free on a kickoff.

On the next play, Cleveland's Otto Graham sneaked over from the one for the touchdown that put Cleveland ahead, 13-3, with eight seconds left in the half.

The Giants, pepped up by Coach Steve Owen during the intermission, came surging out like lions in the third quarter. With Scott, Tulane's Eddie Price and Kansas's Forrest Griffith piling through wide holes in the Cleveland line, the Giants marched 48 yards for a touchdown. Griffith plunged over left tackle for the final two yards.

That made the score 13-10, Cleveland and set the stage for the Giant's rousing rally in the final quarter.

A Graham-to-Mac Speedie pass gave the Browns the ball on the New York 34 with seconds to go. Graham threw another long one and Schnellbaucher snared it to end the threat.

Rams Run Wild

Colts Buried, 70-27, For 18th Loss in Row

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 22 (AP)—The Los Angeles Rams buried the winless Baltimore Colts under a 10 touchdown avalanche today for a 70-27 victory in their National Football League engagement.

A crowd of 16,026 citizens attended, making this an all time low for a Rams' home game in huge Memorial Coliseum.

The defeat was the eighteenth straight for luckless Baltimore in a string that ranges back more than a year through exhibitions and the Colts' play in the defuct All-America Conference.

Halfback Glenn Davis, on the first play from scrimmage in the game, sailed a long pass to Elroy Hirsch for 58 yards and a touchdown. The game was only 22 seconds old.

And when Baltimore tied the score on a 55-yard pass play from Quarterback Adrian Burk to Halfback Billy Stone, the Rams' shifty Vitamin T. Smith took the next kickoff and sent his team quickly to the fore with a 95-yard return down the center of the field.

The Rams were never in trouble thereafter, and everybody got into the act before the scoring finally ended.

The Rams held a 35-13 lead at halftime and poured on five more touchdowns in the next two quarters.

The two Los Angeles quarterbacks, Norm Van Brocklin and Bob Waterfield, each tossed two touchdown strikes during the course of the debacle. Van Brocklin's throws were good for 33 and 42 yards, and Waterfield connected with a 47-yarder and another good for five. On a bootleg play, Waterfield ran 13 yards for one tally and

Eagles Beat Steelers in Last Period

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 22 (AP).—Steve Van Buren, after falling 6 inches short of scoring territory in four attempts in the second period, bowled through the Pittsburgh line for the game winning touchdown in the final period today as the Philadelphia Eagles nipped the Pittsburgh Steelers 17-10.

A capacity crowd of 35,662 saw the National Football League contest.

The veteran Van Buren shared hero honors with teammate Tommy Thompson whose rifle-shot aerials paved the way to Philadelphia's two six-pointers and a field goal.

Thompson also took the edge off the throwing performance of Steeler Joe Geri, the pro loop's leading passer going into today's game.

It was a Geri toss to Fran Rogel in the third period that produced Pittsburgh's initial score. And Geri's toe added an additional four points with the conversion and a field goal later in the same quarter.

The scoreless first half was a story of bruising line play and cautious tactics.

But the game exploded into action at start of the third period. Philadelphia's Norman Willey snared a Geri pass on the fourth play of the period and scampered 45 yards to the end zone for the first score.

Geri and Rogel came back on the first play after kickoff to fashion their 64-yard scoring pass. Three minutes later Geri booted his field goal from the Eagle 24 to give Johnny Nichelosen's Pittsburghers a 10-7 bulge.

Patton, Philadelphia's booting specialist, entered the contest with the final period only one play old. His kick from the 23 was almost effortless as it soared for a game-tying field goal.

Then Van Buren polished off a Thompson-to-Jack Ferrante pass play that carried 73 yards to the Steelers' 5 with a piledriving smash off right guard to scoring territory.

Midway the second quarter, Thompson and Ziegler alternated in offensive roles as the Eagles ground to the Pittsburgh 25. Van Buren drove off tackle to the 10.

In three plays the big LSU halfback ate up 8 of the 10 vital yards toward pay dirt. But his next try was stopped half a foot from the end zone and the Steelers took over on downs.

Justice Runs 27 Yards, Catches 2 Passes, Just Misses Scoring

IN ADDITION to accounting for about 5000 of the 27,856 customers,—the largest Redskins' crowd of the season, here's what else Choo Choo Justice did for the Redskins in his pro debut against the Chicago Cardinals at Griffith Stadium yesterday.

1. He carried the ball from scrimmage once and gained 6 yards.

2. He returned two punts for 12 yards, a 7-yard run being the longer of the two.

3. He returned three kickoffs for 55 yards, the longest single excursion being 27 yards.

4. He caught two Harry Gilmer passes, one for 28 yards in the third period that paved the way for the third Redskins' touchdown.

Choo-Choo almost scored after catching Gilmer's third period pass.

Don Paul, Cardinal safetyman, met him at the 5-yard line where Justice did a little jig-dance trying to outmaneuver Paul.

"But he wouldn't be outmaneuvered," Justice said in the dressing room after the game. "I'd probably have scored in college on that play, but these pros are a lot smarter than the college players.

"I didn't help the team much today," Justice added. "It's just too big a jump from the minor leagues to the big leagues in one week. I hope to do better next Sunday against the Eagles," the triple-threat from North Carolina added.

Coach Herman Ball, who was pretty solemn after seeing his Redskins drop their fourth straight game, said he was satisfied with Justice's first day's performance.

"His legs aren't in shape yet, but he'll definitely help us soon. He's what we've been needing,—a breakaway runner. Wish we had gotten him sooner."

27,856 Turn Out For Justice's Debut

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Redskins yesterday didn't do Justice by their new boy Charlie. They showed him off to a Griffith Stadium gathering of 27,856 but failed to show either him or the Chicago Cardinals much in the way of football until it was too late and got beat again, 38-28.

It was the fourth licking in five games for the Redskins who by this time are probably wishing tomorrow was November 26 so they could play the Baltimore Colts and finally win another game.

Going into yesterday's game, the winless Colts were the only team the Redskins and Cards had beaten this season. After the second quarter, only the Redskins could make that statement. The Cards scored four touchdowns in that period and the Redskins spent the rest of the day trying to catch up. As the score indicates, they failed.

They did manager to pull up from a 38-14 halftime deficit to a more respectable 10-point margin by the game's end, but as yet, there are no Oscars being awarded in the National Football League for being close.

Harry Gilmer quarterbacked the Redskins practically every second of the way for the second straight game, and he didn't do a bad job of it, either.

He threw three touchdown passes—all to Bones Taylor. Fullback Rob Goode accounted for the other Redskins' score on a 2-yard plunge, but a Gilmer pass to Justice set it up. It was a 28-yard pass play from Alabama Harry to North Carolina Choo Choo, which paved the way for Goode's smackover.

Frank Tripucka, understudy to Johnny Lujack at Notre Dame, and understudy to Jim Hardy in the four previous Cardinals' games, was at the controls for the Chicagoans. He flipped two touchdown passes, one a 64-yarder to End Bob Shaw in the middle of the turbulent second quarter and the other an 81-yarder to Rookie End Frank Polsoot at the end of the same busy period.

Elmer Angsman, plunging over from the two-yard line, Charlie Trippi on an eight-yard excursion, and Defensive End Tom Wham, on a 40-yard interception of a Sammy Baugh pitchout accounted for the other three Chicago touchdowns.

Fullback Pat Harder kicked all five extra points and also added a 32-yard field goal.

The victory was the second for the Cardinals in five games and avenged a 31-7 licking they took from the Redskins when the locals were making a sweep of their five-game coast-to-coast preseason games.

The Redskins played the Cardinals on even terms until the final seconds of the first period. After that the Cardinals took over, piled up their big margin in the next quarter and held on.

The Chicagoans went 49 yards on three plays for a touchdown in the first three minutes of the game. A 40-yard Tripucka pass to Polsfoot was followed by Elmer Angsman's 2-yard plunge for the score.

Thirty-three seconds later it was 7-7, with the Redskins moving 34 yards in two plays to tie it up. Hall Haynes got the attack under way with a 61-yard return of Ventan Yablonski's kickoff. Two plays later Gilmer found Taylor all by his lonesome in the end zone and hit him with a 20-yarder for a touchdown.

Near the end of the period, Pat Harder booted a 32-yard field goal to give the Cards the 3-point bulge they took in their highly successful second period.

The entrance of Baugh into the game for the first time soon was followed by another Cards' touchdown. After Bill Dudley, who had a bad day yesterday, had raced 15 yards for a first down on the Redskins' 45, Baugh called for a pitchout to Dudley. It

Bub Worsham Killed In Auto Crash

6 miles west of Wake Forest.

Worsham's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Worsham, sr., 7910 MacArthur blvd., Cabin John, Md. Other survivors include brothers Lew, National Open champ in 1947 and pro at Oakmont, Pa.; Virgil (Buck), assistant pro at Congressional Country Club in Washington, and Walter, who assisted Lew until recently. A sister, Mrs. Uva May Cable, also survives.

Worsham, a Wake Forest senior, was a star on the golf team. Young Scheer played on the freshman basketball team last year. He's the son of Mrs. Virginia Scheer.

With such talent in the family, it was only natural for Bubby to excel in golf. He was the Metropolitan Schoolboy champion in 1946-47 and was the first boy ever to win The Washington Post trophy two years running.

He started playing competitive golf in 1944 when he shot an 87. At Bethesda-Chevy Chase High, young Worsham was unbeaten captain of the golf team for two years. He accumulated 35 consecutive victories in match play.

In 1947, Bubby went to the semifinals of the National Caddy tournament at Columbus, Ohio. He competed in various amateur tournaments throughout the country.

Last year he qualified for the National Amateur tourney at Pittsfield, N. Y. and played in the National Intercollegiate at Albuquerque, N. Mex.

Marshall Gives Redskins Little Talk at Halftime

The Redskin's president, making his first halftime dressing room appearance of the season, told the Redskins, who were trailing, 38-14, at the time:

"You should be ashamed of yourselves. You're not playing football. You're letting the fans down."

One player said Marshall even accused the team of not trying.

The Redskins scored 14 points in the second half against none for the Cardinals, but the final result was: Cardinals 38, Redskins 28.

Prep High Players of the Week

PAT HALEY

EASILY THE outstanding player of Georgetown Prep's game with St. John's, even though his Prep team was the loser, was Pat Haley, The Washington Post's and Touchdown Club's Prep School Player of the Week.

Pat Haley

Right End Haley, a powerful and speedy player, gave St. John's fits with his all-around performance.

Even though St. John's won, 20-7, Pat, a 16-year-old junior, caught five passes that accounted for more than 150 yards gained. The longest play of the game was when he latched onto a 6-yard aerial and galloped 80 yards to a touchdown.

Haley played a major role in slowing down the vaunted Cadet ground attack, too. Playing in the backer-up position and calling defensive signals, Pat closed many a hole in the line with his 6-foot, 1-inch, 181-pound frame.

The Washington Post and the Touchdown Club are not alone in recognizing Pat's Friday performance.

A group of St. John's players called at the Haley home Friday evening to congratulate Pat.

—BILL GILBERT.

SAM EBERDT
WASHINGTON-LEE

THE MAN WHO said one man's loss is another's gain must have had Sam Eberdt in mind.

Sam, who doubles as tailback and fullback, certainly was a gain for Washington-Lee High of Arlington. It was Greensboro's (N.C.) loss when he came north last year to be one of the finest high school football players in the area.

Sam Eberdt

The Washington Post and the Touchdown Club have selected Sam as the High School Player of the Week because of the way he led the Little Generals to a 25-0 victory over strong Eastern Friday night.

Sam, who plays fullback on defense, too, scored two touchdowns, one on a 51-yard run and the other on a 2-yard plunge. Twice he threw a pass to John Sherrlein, the play totaling 61 yards.

Sam, president of the student body and an honor student, is a favorite topic of conversation for his coach, Ken Batson.

One of the things Batson likes most about Sam is that he's a team player. After his 51-yard run against Eastern, Batson gave him the customary pat-on-the-back.

Eberdt shrugged off the congratulations with, "Shucks, coach, did you see those six blue jerseys in front of me?".

Layne Muffs Opportunity To Tie Game

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 22 (AP).—Tricky Frank Albert, quarterbacking his greatest game of the season, led the San Francisco 49ers to a 28-27 victory over the Detroit Lions today in a thrill-filled National Professional Football League football game.

A crowd of 27,350 cheering fans saw the left-handed star pass and direct his team to its first win of the schedule, after five previous defeats.

Detroit, fighting an uphill battle, missed a tie when quarterback Bobby Layne failed to convert after his team's fourth touchdown.

The 49ers lead from the start, scoring two touchdowns in the opening quarter, and one each in the second and third periods.

The Lions, pre-game favorites, crossed the 49ers goalline in the second period, pushed over two more touchdowns in the third, and one more in the last.

San Francisco scored its first touchdown some six minutes after the game got under way. Jim Powers, playing backfield defense, intercepted Layne's pass and returned 31 yards to Detroit's 26. Albert's 13-yarder to right half John Stryzkalski highlighted the march, with Fullback Joe Perry going over from the 2-yard line.

The 49ers came right back with a 51-yard touchdown drive. Perry's lateral to Stryzkalski netted 31 yards to the 9, from where Albert passed to Right End Alyn Beals in the end zone.

The 49ers made it 21-0 in the second quarter, traveling 46 yards, mainly on three passes good for 40 yards. On the third toss, from Detroit's 4, Albert connected with Left End Gordon Soltau in the end zone.

Detroit broke into the scoring column in the second period with a 68-yard thrust, with Layne's 58-yard touchdown throw to Left End Cloyce Box yielding the points.

Albert outfoxed the rampaging Lions in the closing three minutes when he steered his team to two first downs while freezing the ball.

The 49ers built their lead to 28-7 by taking the third period kickoff 80 yards to a touchdown. Albert completed three passes in the sally, the last 12 yards to Halfback Sam Cathcart for the score. Gordon Soltau made all four conversions.

Doak Walker, Detroit left half, who also filled a starring role, took a lateral and raced 30 yards for a touchdown to climax a 77-yard third period drive. He also converted.

A San Francisco fumble recovered by Jim Cain of Detroit in the 49er end zone, resulted in the third touchdown. The 49ers were backed up close to their own goal when Halfback Cason fumbled.

Walker, former SMU star, suffered an ankle injury and was carried off the field in the third period.

Scoring by periods:

Detroit	0	7	14	6—27
San Francisco	14	7	7	0—28

Detroit scoring: Touchdowns—Box, Walker, Cain, Rifenburg. Points after touchdown—Walker (2, placekicks), Layne (placekick).

San Francisco scoring: Touchdowns—Perry, Beals, Soltau, Cason. Points after touchdown—Soltau (4, placekicks).

Top College Player
Navy's Zastrow Wins Week's Honors

BOB ZASTROW—Navy's Big Z—is The Washington Post's and Touchdown Club's College Player of the Week.

"Zug," as the Middies call their 210-pound junior quarterback from Algoma (Wisc.), led Navy to a 27-14 upset victory over Southern California at Baltimore Saturday.

Bob Zastrow

It was a game that Navy didn't figure to win, but the Trojans evidently hadn't figured on Zastrow.

His masterful selection of plays, deft passing and confident ball-handling and faking led the Middies to their first victory of the season.

Zastrow was so sure-handed in his handoffs and smart fakes that not once did Navy fumble behind the line of scrimmage.

Zastrow, who played in Navy's first three games despite a sore pitching hand, loosened up the Trojans with his pin-point passing and he made better use of his backs than any Navy quarterback has in the past three years.

Big Z scored twice in the Sailors' great victory—their first of the season, but it was his second score that broke the back of the USC comeback in the fourth quarter. With a 20-0 Navy lead cut to 20-14 and only 6 minutes left, Zastrow carried the fight right to the Trojans. He passed the Sailors to the 18-yard line and at that point unveiled a new role for himself—as a running quarterback.

On a smart quarterback keeper play, Zastrow turned end for the touchdown that sealed the Trojans' defeat. Earlier, he scored on a 1-yard quarterback sneak, after throwing a perfect pass to End Jim Baldinger which missed being a touchdown only because Baldinger fell the wrong way and landed 1 yard short of a touchdown.

"Bob's performance gave us an awful big lift—the lift that we needed," Eddie Erdelatz, the happy Navy coach, said last night. "He gave us the confidence we needed."

Keene 7-5 Tonight Over Red Arrow

Julian Keene, local light heavyweight, is a 7-5 favorite tonight over Indian Red Arrow in the 10-round main fight event at Turner's Arena.

The Cherokee Indian from Oklahoma City scored a technical knockout over Keene in a previous meeting here last winter. The loss marks Keene's only defeat in the past two years.

Red Aroow is a tough type of fighter and recently stopped the highly-touted Tommy Baker in five rounds.

Roland Randell, who staged a terrific battle with Keene in the opening show of the indoor season, comes back tonight for a special five-round match with Johnny Holt, another promising local fighter.

The other five-round matches have been arranged. Eddie Marshall, who kayood Scott Richardson his last time out, meets Garland Edwards, local middleweight, in one of these bouts while Kenny Leach, Baltimore lightweight, battles Fernando Aquilar of Mexico in the other.

Two four-rounders complete the show. Lightweights Jimmy Briscoe and Joe Davis will see action while Battling Moore steps out against big Ben Harrison, local heavyweight.

This Weeks' Football
Army, Oklahoma, SMU Play Easy Ones

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP).—The big five of football—Army, Oklahoma, Southern Methodist, Kentucky, and California—had it easy last Saturday and face no trouble this coming weekend with one exception:

Fourth-ranked Kentucky meets Georgia Tech at Atlanta in one of the Nation's best games. The Wildcats marched on, 34-7, over Villanova.

As for the other unbeaten giants, Army, rated Number One, rolled over Harvard, 49-0, and will face a Columbia team, routed by Pennsylvania, 34-0; Oklahoma, Number Two, buried Kansas State, 58-0, and should not be bothered by Iowa State; SMU, Number Three, after crushing Rice, 42-21, will be idle; and California, Number Five, after besting Oregon State, 27-0, takes on St. Mary's, which won its first game of the year by toppling Oregon, 18-13.

Four big unbeaten teams were given their first defeats last Saturday. Washington lost to Illinois, 20-13; Vanderbilt lost to Florida, 31-27; Wisconsin lost to Michigan, 26-13, and Stanford lost to UCLA, 21-7.

There were four other big surprises, too. Indiana beat Notre Dame, 20-7; Lehigh upset Dartmouth, 16-14; thrice-beaten Navy toppled Southern California, 27-14, and high-riding Maryland was tripped by North Carolina State, 16-13.

Two undefeated Ivy League teams collide in the East's top game at Princeton, N. J. Princeton, conqueror of Brown 34-0, meets Cornell, which gave Yale its first defeat, 7-0. In another leading eastern game Penn faces Navy.

Out in the Far West Stanford and Washington meet in the top Pacific Coast Conference game.

In the Southwest, the best game pits Texas, which knocked off Arkansas 19-14, against Rice.

Maryland, now twice beaten, meets Duke, winner over Richmond 41-0, in a top Southern Conference battle.

Twelfth-ranked Clemson, tied by South Carolina, faces Wake Forest, and Vanderbilt, trying a comeback, takes on Arkansas. Tennessee, which beat Alabama 14-9, engages a spunky Washington and Lee team which downed Davidson 47-12.

Santa Clara Routs Nevada

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Oct. 22 (AP).—Santa Clara today won "the battle of the losers," overwhelming Nevada, 55-0, before 5000 fans in Hughes Stadium.

The Santa Clara Broncs parlayed slick passing with four key interceptions of Wolfpack aerials to amass their total. The win snapped the Bronc losing skein for the year at four. It was the Nevadans fifth straight defeat.

The passing of Quarterbacks Johnny "Pasco, Len Napolitano and Abe Dung was the feature of the Broncos' powerful attack. Pasco tossed for three touchdowns, Napolitano for one and Dung, playing the T-quarterback spot for the first time in varsity competition, threw two-last-quarter touchdown passes.

Italo-Americans Take Soccer Lead

The Italo-Americans took the lead in Washington and Suburban Soccer League competition yesterday, defeating Charles County, 4-2, at Hughesville. In other games Washington Soccer Club defeated Marlboro, 4-3, and Washington French tied Washington Park, 4-4. Summaries:

Italo-Americans, 4; Charles County, 2. Half time score, 1-1. Goals: Italians—Dick (2), McInally, Bradley (penalty). Charles County — Elder, C. Hancock. Referees—Nobles and Watson.

Washington Soccer Club, 4; Marlboro, 2. Half time: Marlboro, 2; Washington, 1. Goals: Washington—Sienuta (2), Bruzzese, Susha. Marlboro—Freeman, Richards. Referees—Horning and Muhlhausen.

Washington French, 4; Maryland Park, 4. Half time—Maryland Park, 3; French, 2. Goals: French—Dubac, Roa, Conde, Amaler. Maryland Park — Buchanan, Mirones, Carrington, Pickett. Referees—Freytag and Rinkus.

Langdon Lions Beat K. C.

The Langdon Lions, 160-pound Metropolitan League football champions, defeated Carroll Council, Knights of Columbus, 20-7, yesterday at Fairlawn Field.

In another league game, Liberty Auto Body won over Great Falls, Va., 31-0, at Alexandria Municipal Stadium. Liberty scored four touchdowns in the first five minutes of the game.

Langdon Lions	6	0	14	0	20
Knights of Columbus	0	0	0	7	7

Langdon scoring: Touchdowns—Eccloff, Grade, Wedding. Extra points—Smith (2). Knights of Columbus scoring: Touchdown—Mallonne. Extra point—Jones.

Auto Body scoring: Touchdowns—Taylor, Werle, Gregory, Brand, Bech. Extra point—Watson.

Montgomery Leads Gonzaga To 14-0 Victory

Gonzaga ground out a 14-0 victory over Baltimore's Calvert Hall yesterday on Georgetown's Medical School field.

Leading Gonzaga to its fourth triumph in five outings was Whitey Montgomery, a sure-fingered pass receiver.

Montgomery took a toss from Jim Cody for a 45-yard gain to Calvert Hall's five right before intermission. Jim McCallum bucked for the score.

Gonzaga wrapped it up in the last minute of play on a short pass into the end zone from McCallum to Montgomery.

Both conversions were made by Leo Di Valentino.

Ed Lopat and Frank Shea held the Maine team to four scattered hits, two of them by Catcher Frank Archer. Phil Rizzuto had four for five.

Touchdowners Honor Caps, Players of Week

Coach Bones McKinney and his Washington Caps will be guests of honor with Bones making the key talk. Jocko Collins, top NBA official and Phillies' scout, also will speak.

The Caps are playing in a benefit doubleheader at Uline Thursday for the Touchdown Club's welfare fund. They'll meet the Baltimore Bullets. In the first game it will be the Philadelphia Warriors vs. the New York Knickerbockers.

Also invited today are the Touchdown Club and The Washington Post's players of the week—Navy's Bob Zastrow, Georgetown Prep's Pat Haley and Sam Eberdt, Washington-Lee High.

Morningside Wins

Morningside A. C. won, 13-0, over Swift Co. yesterday at Fairlawn with Dick Hillary throwing a 40-yard touchdown pass to Dave Musselman and one for 20 yards to Tony Davis.

'Made Them Mishandle Ball'
N.C. State's Changing Defense Confused Terps, Feathers Says

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 22 (AP).—Coach Beattie Feathers of North Carolina State said he knew he couldn't beat Maryland by straight-away football, so "we confused 'em."

"We kept them in a dither by changing our defense every time they turned around," the former Tennessee backfield star said today. "We kept making them mishandle the ball."

N. C. State scored one of Saturday's major upsets by whipping Maryland, the Nation's eighth-ranked team, at College Park, 16-13.

"Our scouts told us they were big and tough and had plenty of speed," Feathers declared.

"We knew we would have to devise something good to stop them, so we decided on a constantly changing defense. We used a four-man line sometimes, then an undershifted six, then an eight.

"They were so mixed up they kept mishandling the ball. I think there must have been more than half a dozen fumbles which we recovered."

Feathers said on his four-man line defense, he had four other men up close in the secondary ready to go any way the play did.

"Harvey Yeates, our fullback, called defensive signals and did a good job," he added. "Our men got confused, too, sometimes, but I think it only made our defense more effective."

Feathers said he regards Maryland as one of the best teams in the South and he particularly praised Quarterback John Scarbath and Halfback Bob Shemonski.

"It's one of the fastest big teams I've ever seen," he said.

Feathers had high praise for his big tackle, Elmer Costa.

"Costa played one of the best games I've seen on any field," he said. "He was really smashing through there and breaking up Maryland plays."

He said Ed Mooney, halfback, also played an outstanding game for State, but added:

"It wasn't one or two men. It was all of them, and that changing defense."

Crowds Drop 8 Million In Minor Leagues

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 22 (AP).—Minor league baseball attendance fell off more than 8,000,000 during the 1950 season, the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues reported today.

The minors' office said 57 minor leagues had a total attendance of 35,566,346, with paid admissions totaling 32,910,377.

This total was 8,127,352 persons below the 1949 total.

Play-off games drew 1,456,923.

As in the past year, the AAA Pacific Coast League led them all with total attendance of 3,179,170. The two other AAA leagues were far behind, but the coast league operates on a 200-game schedule and the other two play 154.

The International League reported total attendance of 1,719,511 and the American Association attracted 1,504,845 — but both were behind the Southern Association, an AA loop which reported total attendance of 1,745,340.

The Texas League, the other AA league, rated fourth place nationally behind the International League, with 1,659,101.

Riggs-Jachym Stars Tour Calls It Quits—Poor Gates

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 22 (AP).—Promoter Bobby Riggs announced tonight cancellation of the barnstorming tour of American and National League baseball players.

Riggs blamed bad weather conditions and poor gate receipts. The tour started in Montreal earlier this month and had been scheduled to end in Oakland, Calif., on November 5. John J. Jachym was associated with Riggs in promoting the tour.

The management and players agreed to settle for 50 per cent of their contracts. The cancellation was announced before the start of tonight's game—the second of the day and last of the tour.

DEAR FOLKS, AT LAUREL

Although those with cheap horses are bemoaning the fact that Laurel and Pimlico are giving them the go-by, some good news came last week with the announcement that Sunshine Park (Tampa) would have a winter meeting starting January 27. Discussing the Marlboro fire, a race fan said, "I guess there will always be stable fires as long as inflammable hay and straw, and human beings are around. One thing is certain: the horses don't start fires." The fact is that a horse did start a fire at a nearby track by chewing the insulation off an electric wire. Lest we forget, there will be no racing here on Tuesday. See you on the rail Monday and Wednesday. BILL.

Atalanta May Head Field of 12

LAUREL, Oct. 22.—The twenty-fifth running of the Selima Stakes, mile and a sixteenth fixture for 2-year-old fillies on Saturday will be the top attraction of the week of sport at Laurel race course.

With $25,000 added, the Selima is the richest fixture in the east for members of this division and indications point to a banner field.

Six of the nine horses entered in yesterday's Demoiselle Stakes at Jamaica are eligible for the Selima and the majority are expected to ship to Laurel early in the week for their final preps.

Brookmeade Stable's Atlanta, already winner of three stakes this season heads the groups of Demoiselle runners who are expected to renew their rivalry here on Saturday. Others include Woodvale Farm's Boot All, D. A. Headley's Aunt Jinny, Belair Stud's Vulcania, Foxcatcher Farm's Rose Fern and Greentree Stable's Toto.

The fact that several Selima candidates are on the grounds and that others may be shipped in, leads to the belief that the field will number at least a dozen and may go considerably higher.

Brookmeade has two rainbows on hand as a running mate for Atlanta. Trainer Jim Hastie shipped in E. B. Benjamin's Signal for the Selima while Brookfield Farm is expected to be represented by Inanabout.

Eagle, 3 Aces Make Golf News

Mike Jankowski Scores Hole-In-One At Prince Georges

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

Four sensational shots, three holes-in-one and a long eagle dominated area golf play over the weekend.

At Prince Georges Country Club, Mike Jankowski plopped his tee shot on the 162-yard fourteenth hole into the cup. He was using a 7 iron and playing in a threesome with Bud Smith, Dr. Leonard Levine and Bob Morris. Jankowski had a one-under-par 71 for the round.

E. C. Chappell got a 145-yard ace at Fairfax Country Club on the fourth hole. He used a 6 iron. Chappell's playing partners were R. J. Madison, W. C. Gallagher and S. C. Newman.

Page Cornwell's 140-yard eagle on the par five, fifth hole at the Columbia Country Club was one of the prettiest shots of the year according to his playing partners, Don Buckingham, Ed Rice, and Elden McFarland. The ball took one bounce and hopped into the cup.

Air Force Maj. R. W. Joiner got the final hole-in-one of the day, a 147-yarder on the first hole at the United States Soldiers' Home course. He was in a foursome with Jack Rogers, O. K. Fletcher, and W. A. Duncan.

ARMY NAVY: Admiral L. J. Huffman, 81—12—69, won the men's sweepstakes. Col. R. H. Skinner, with a net 71, was second and L. M. Adams, with a net 72, was third.

Col. and Mrs. J. A. Overmeyer won the mixed team sweepstakes with a net 156. Col. A. B. Coxe and Mrs. G. L. Kohr were second with a net 160.

KENWOOD: E. M. Cahill, 83—8—75, won the blind bogey. J. C. Larson and W. T. Allen tied for second with net 72s, and H. R. Jones, E. S. Pardoe, H. T. Morse, R. L. Wilcox, A. M. Nowland and C. J. Holdredge tied for fourth with net 71s.

WASHINGTON: Claude Wild and J. S. Baldwin won the Harrell Cup for the two-man team championship, beating R. K. Rose and H. D. Kerfoot, 4 and 3.

Mrs. M. L. Hamby and R. H. Rise, 87—16—71, won the mixed Scotch foursome. Mrs. A. G. Simmonds and R. E. Hotze, Mrs. E. L. Duffies and D. E. Ball, Mrs. D. R. Monsees and Dr. W. A. Price, and Mrs. E. H. Fortney and Chick Featherstone all tied for second with net 72s. Mrs. W. A. Walsh and Maj. O. M. Hines took low gross with 83.

BETHESDA: Joe LaSalle won the club championship, defeating Bill Harris, 7 and 6, in a 36-hole match. After going out in 73 and taking a two-up lead at the turn, LaSalle turned on the heat and shot a 2-under 33 for his third nine holes on the heavy course. He was seven up at the end of the third nine holes. The next three were halved to close out the match.

BELLE HAVEN: Frank Woolley won the club championship, defeating Col. Ben Schriever, 5 and 4. Wooley had a par 70 for his first round of the scheduled 36-hole match and was six up at the end of 18 holes.

C. E. Nicholson, 85—18—67, won the Sweepstakes tournament. Col. L. Dusard and Jay Kurtz tied for second with net 68s. The Blue team, captained by Frank Woolley, defeated the Grey team, led by Shriever, 12½-11½.

EAST POTOMAC—Frank Mailley defeated Jack Sayers, 1 up, and Julian Williams beat Wilson Reid, 1 up in championship flight matches played in the club tournament yesterday. Other results:

SECOND FLIGHT

Bob Martino beat Kotvan, 2 up. Joe Zoeller beat Jerry Enright, 2 up; Fred Hankle beat Bob McDaniels, 1 up; Al Dunay beat Frank Battista, 2 and 1.

THIRD FLIGHT

Paul Whittington beat Charley Scheer, 2 and 1; Joe Kirby beat Bob Horn, 1 up; Bill Weiss beat Pat Foley, 3 and 2; Frank Bevacqua beat L. Darcey, 2 and 1.

ROCK CREEK: George Graham, 36, 35—71, and Jim Duffy, 36, 36—72, led last week's qualifiers in the Turkey Tournament. Match play starts today and will compete for over a month. Four flights of golfers will compete for eight turkeys.

E. C. Chappell, Major Joiner Join Honor List

WOODMONT: Jerry Footer won the President's Cup tournament with 77—8—69. Ed Wortman won the first flight championship, defeating Lou Miller, one up in 19 holes. Wortman's victory made the club championship tournament strictly a family affair. Last week his son, Dave, won the championship flight.

INDIAN SPRING: Joe Zekas and Ben Cohen won the Phil Berman Two Man Team Trophy, beating Bud Sharkey and Tom Mudd, 4 and 3. Zekas and Cohen played their first nine holes in a 5-under-par best ball 30. The pair was seven under par when the match ended.

Mrs. K. S. Giles and Mrs. Marty Gordon defeated Mildred Jorg and Lilian Skusca, one up in the finals of the two woman team championship. Frank Butler and John Feeney won the men's consolation flight, defeating Ted Cohen and Harry Gershenson, 4 and 3. Sol Rosenblatt and Maj. John Taylor won the blind bogey with net 73s.

ARGYLE: Lase Franklin was announced as winner of the ladder tournament. Franklin climbed 24 places on the ladder during the golf season. The ringer tournament winner was J. O. Hall, with a 26 under par 46. C. T. Lawrence and Ray Lawrenson tied for second with 47s.

The mixed Scotch foursome was won by Kay Thomason and Roger Martino with 73, 10—63. Betty Garber and Dick Mothershead took low gross with 78. L. M. Thompson, 92, 28—63, won the sweepstakes tournament. Cidk Bedell was second with a net 67.

FAIRFAX: Oddie Gant's three-below-par round on this difficult course was one of the best of the season. Gant had 33, 35—68.

Anacostia Eagles Whip Forest Heights

The Anacostia unlimited football team defeated Forest Heights, 21-6, yesterday at Fairlawn Field. Paul Blair passed 30 yards to Gene Marshall, who ran another 60 yards for the first Anacostia touchdown. Roger West ran 55 yards for another Eagle touchdown on an intercepted pass.

Anacostia	14	7	0	0	—21
Forest Heights	0	0	6	0	—6

Anacostia: Touchdowns — Marshall, Miller, West. Extra points — Zelenaki (3). Forest Heights Touchdown—Goins.

Mr. Boh wrestles a tough problem!

Mister "Boh" was in his glory, as the announcer called his name.. But when the champion he did see, he was sorry that he came.
"No pinching, gouging or kicking shins, and you can't pull hair or scratch," said the referee to the two of them at the beginning of the match!
As the bell rang out they tangled, and fell with an awful thud. Our "Boh" was surely losing, but in his eye there was blood!
"Boh" came back with a vengeance, set the champion on his ear. The crowd went wild for Mister "Boh" and National Bohemian Beer.

Coolidge Must Beat Roosevelt Friday to Stay in Interhigh Title Race

Schedule Favors Tech In Group II

By Bill Gilbert

Coolidge's Colts meet Roosevelt in an Interhigh League game Friday at Roosevelt, and the Colts must win this one if they are to stay in the running for the Group II championship.

The Colts, with one win and a loss, play Bell and Eastern, strong Group I team, after Friday, while McKinley Tech, Group II leader with two victories and a tie, has only to win from weak Bell and Roosevelt.

In another league game Friday, Chamberlain plays Anacostia at Anacostia. Both games start at 3:15 p. m.

A good bit of the Coolidge attack rests on the strong shoulders of triple-threat back Arnie Tranen, 180-pound senior playing his third year of varsity ball.

One of the best high school passers in the area, Tranen is equally adept at running and punting. His passes can be the long, floater type, or a short, hard bullet, depending on the situation.

He's a shifty runner who uses his speed to get up to the line of scrimmage while the hole is still there and then employs his elusiveness to get past the secondary.

Roosevelt will pin its hopes on Bill Smith, who directs the Rough Riders' attack from his quarterback position on the T and single wing.

Highs' Schedule For This Week

FRIDAY
Coolidge at Roosevelt.
Chamberlain at Anacostia.
Craddock at Mount Vernon.
Maryland Park at De Matha.
Laurel at Rockville.
Bullis "B" at Charlotte Hall.
Parker-Gray at Armstrong.
Cardoza at Manassas.
Baltimore Dunbar vs. Washington Dunbar, Brooks Stadium.
Gonzaga at McKinley Tech.
James Wood (Winchester) at Randolph-Macon.
Devitt at Georgtown Prep.
Frederick at Bethesda-Chevy Chase.
Warrenton at Herndon.
Baltimore Friends at St. Albans.
Baltimore City at George Washington, night.
Sherwood at Gaithersburg, night.
Woodward at Stuyvesant, night.
Carver Vocational at Parker-Gray, night.
St. John's at Washington-Lee, night.
Falls Church at Falsmouth, night.
Western at Fairfax, night.

SATURDAY
Montgomery Blair at Hyattsville, College Park.
Bell at St. Mary's Annapolis.

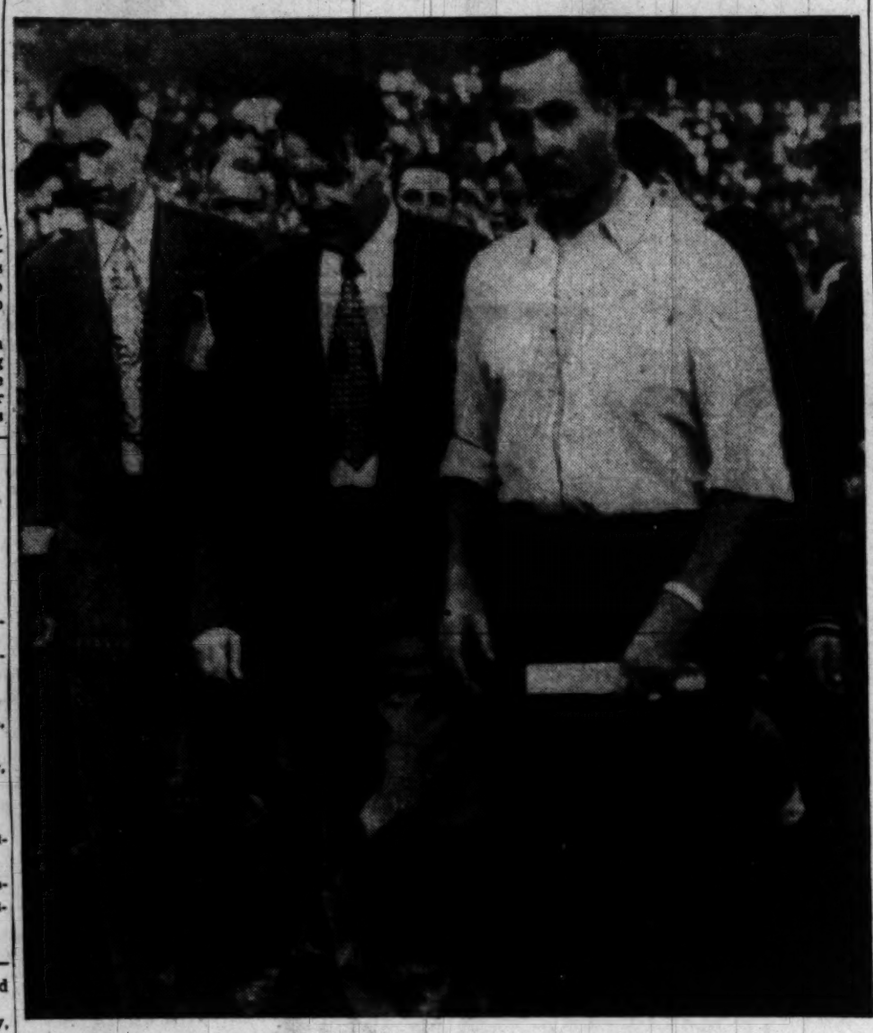
Bladensburg vs. Mount Rainier, College Park, night.

SUNDAY
Bullis at Aquinas (Rochester).



BEATEN MAN—Notre Dame Coach Frank Leahy (center) grimly walks off the field after the 20-7 Irish loss to Indiana at Bloomington. The mussed-up Mr. Leahy almost looks as if he absorbed some of that physical punishment Indiana dished out. It can't be easy for Leahy to lose—in nine years as a head coach before this year he's won 80, dropped only 5 and played 5 ties. Right now, he's 2 and 2

Rebels Scare Bears But Lose, 47-14

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 22 (AP).—T-master Sid Luckman hurled a trio of touchdown passes here today as the Chicago Bears came from behind a first-period deficit to wallop the Richmond Rebels, 47-14, in a football exhibition.

The Bears, tuning up for next Sunday's important National Football League battle with the New York Yanks, found themselves on the short end of a 7-0 score against the American Football League champion Rebels at the end of the first quarter.

But the Chicago outfit turned three pass interceptions into touchdowns in the second period to take a 21-7 margin and added four more tallies in an action-packed final quarter.

The Rebels, coached by former Bear Quarterback Keith Molesworth, scored late in the first quarter, going 54 yards in three plays. Former VMI ace Bobby Thomason hit Denver Mills with a 29-yard pass, missed one aerial and then tossed 25 yards to Joe (Pop) Corn for a touchdown.

After the Rebels had pulled to within 7 points in the third period, the Bears broke loose a barrage of four touchdowns in the final quarter.

John (Red) O'Quinn scored twice, on a 16-yard pass from Steve Romanik and a 15-yard toss by Luckman; McAfee scampered across from 5 yards out, and Julie Rykovich went 9 yards to score with a Luckman pitchout.

Score by periods:

Richmond	7	0	7	0	—14

Chicago scoring: Touchdowns—Campana, Kavanaugh, Keane, McAfee, O'Quinn (2), Rykovich. Conversions—Luiack (5, placements).
Richmond scoring: Touchdowns—Corn, Moje. Conversions—Willis (2, placements).

Redskins Lose 4th in Row

REDSKINS—from Pg. 12

worked beautifully—for the Cards. End Wham slammed in, took the ball intended for Dudley and streaked the distance to make it 17-7, Cardinals.

The Redskins, however, bounced right back with a 33-yard excursion to move into serious contention again. Ed Quirk started it by hauling in a Tripucka aerial on the Cards' 33. On the first play, Gilmer again spotted Taylor in touchdown territory and let the big end have the ball for another Redskins' score.

Gilmer faked a handoff into the line to Justice. His sleight-of-hand was so effective that two Cardinals tackled Justice, who didn't happen to have the ball.

Dudley's kick made it 17-14, but soon after that the Redskins were dead ducks.

In quick succession, here's what happened in the last 10 minutes of the busy quarter:

1. Tripucka passed 28 yards to Shaw who caught the ball on the Redskins' 36 and stiff-armed Pete Stout to complete the 64-yard scoring mission. That made it 24-14.

2. Dudley dropped a 57-yard Tripucka punt on the Redskins' four-yard line when Center Bill Blackburn smeared him. Two plays later, Trippi skirted end for the touchedown and the score leaped to 31 to 14, guess who?

3. With less than a minute to play before halftime and deep in their own territory, the Cards quickly got another score. Tripucka, after missing two passes, throwing from his own 19-yard line, connected on a 60-yarder to Poisfoot, who hauled in the ball on the Redskin 30. He gave Harry Dowda the slip and the score quickly became 38 to 14, the Cards: halftime margin.

The Redskins passed and ran 31 yards for their third-quarter touchdown with Goode's two-yard hurdle through tackle completing the journey.

In the fourth period, the Redskins went 70 hard yards for a touchdown, made possible by Chuck Drazenovich's interception of a Tripucka pass on the Redskins' 30-yard line. The payoff heave was a 45-yarder from Gilmer to battery mate Taylor.

The Redskins drove down to the Cardinals' 18-yard line near the end of the game, but they ran out of gas at that point and the Cards very easily and quite successfully managed to hold their 10-point advantage for the last 29 seconds.

Swistowicz in Hospital With Head Injury

Mike Swistowicz, rookie Cardinals' fullback, was in Doctors Hospital last night with undetermined head injuries received in the final minutes of yesterday's game against the Redskins at Griffith Stadium.

Swistowicz, who played for Notre Dame last year, was tackled high and hard by Joe Tereshenski, Redskin end, and had to be carried from the field on a stretcher. Hospital authorities said he suffered a concussion and will be X-rayed this morning to determine whether his skull has been fractured.

President's Cup Game Tickets Requests Accepted

The "President's Cup" football game officials said yesterday that they will start formally accepting reservations this morning for the December 9 classic between two of the Nation's leading teams.

Managing Director Dave Herman said the committee has decided to accept requests at the Willard Hotel without knowing what the prices will be.

The President's Cup game is being sponsored by the District of Columbia American Legion. Teams are to be selected later by a panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

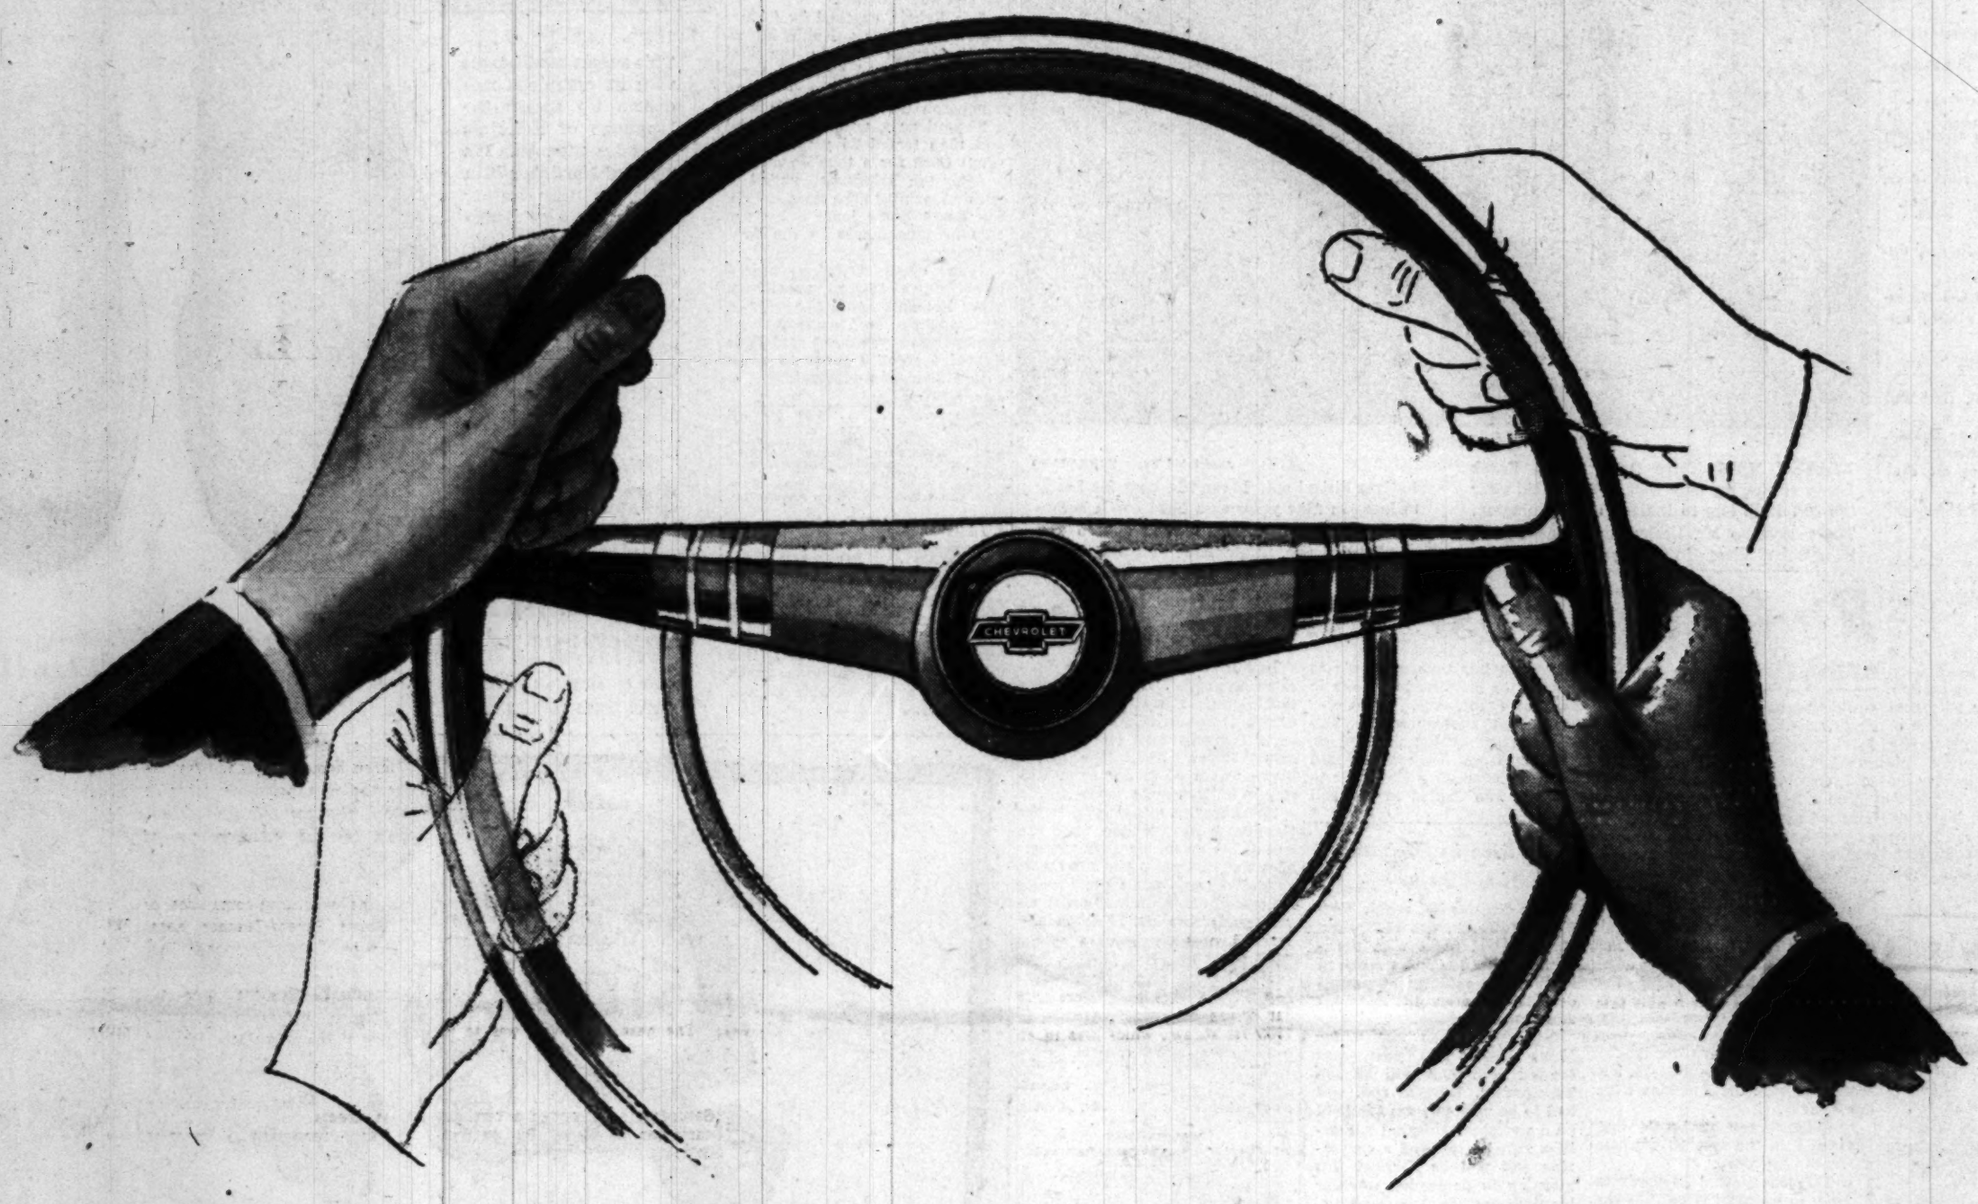
There are Four Hands on Your Steering Wheel



ONE PAIR IS YOURS . . . the other pair belongs to your Chevrolet Dealer. These extra hands do not steer your car, shift gears or give road signals . they are instead, the all-important symbol of your Chevrolet Dealer's concern about your car's performance regardless of when or where you drive it . . . and your satisfaction of ownership regardless of where you bought it.

Chevrolet is the undisputed leader in the entire automotive field. In the Washington area there are more Chevrolet passenger car owners . . . more Chevrolet truck owners . . . more Chevrolet OK used car owners than owners of any other make. Your Chevrolet Dealers have a combined space of a half-million square feet to provide the Chevrolet service these owners need, want and have a right to expect.

The Chevrolet Dealers of the Greater Washington area have the "know-how!" Their mechanics are Chevrolet Graduates...men who know every one of the 3,790 Chevrolet parts...men factory-trained to give your car 100% Chevrolet service. And that, to a Chevrolet owner, is something to think about!

BE SURE YOUR CAR IS SAFE!

You can spare the time...and you may spare a life! Your car has several vital mechanisms subject to constant wear, and it simply cannot be safe to drive unless these are inspected regularly. The lighting system . . . Steering Assembly . . . Windshield Wipers . . . Front End Alignment . . . Hand and Foot Brakes . . . all need an expert's attention. And the logical place to get it is at your nearest Chevrolet Dealer. He has the Chevrolet experience . . . the Chevrolet parts . . . the Chevrolet know-how to save you time and money!

Congress to Consider Extra Pay for Workers In Dangerous Jobs

Extra pay and other benefits for Federal employes in dangerous jobs: That problem will be considered by Congress. This is the story behind it:

When Congress approved the pay-reclassification act a year ago, it ordered the Civil Service Commission to make a study of hazardous Federal jobs and to make recommendations for additional benefits for employes assigned to them. That report is now ready and it will be made public in a few days.

The report will go to the Senate and House Post Office & Civil Service Committees which will consider it, perhaps when Congress returns here late next month. Senator Long (D., La.) is sparking the drive for hazardous pay. He insisted on the Civil Service study.

A precedent already has been established for extra benefits for employes in dangerous jobs. FBI agents and other employes who investigate and detain criminals are now permitted to retire earlier. The Civil Service report will suggest more favorable retirement benefits to other employes such as scientists in dangerous work, and in addition, higher salaries for them.

TEMPORARY ORDER: This week, too, the President may issue an order to place most Federal hiring on a temporary basis. Meantime, a dozen agencies, among them VA, Agriculture and Treasury, have proposed that they be given the authority to make permanent appointments to some of their jobs.

The proposed order, in fact, is running into more and more opposition. Agency officials point out that they now have the authority from Civil Service to make temporary appointments at their options. Many of them would rather operate under it, a plan that gives them discretion in making appointments, rather than a sweeping temporary order.

REALLOCATIONS: One of the ridiculous decisions growing out of the Whitten rider is this—career employes whose jobs are reallocated to higher grades must be given temporary assignments.

This is an example of how it works: Say an employe is a Grade 4 stenographer and Civil Service studies the job and orders it reallocated to a Grade 5. The career person in it must be given a temporary promotion to the higher grade even though his job will remain unchanged.

The Whitten rider which became effective on September 1 requires all grade promotions, interagency transfers, and reinstatements to be made on a temporary basis.

LAY-OFFS: One of the many questions plaguing Civil Service is how to handle lay-offs of employes given temporary indefinite appointments. It's a tough one.

Civil Service officials have drafted a retention plan for temporaries based on length of service, efficiency ratings, veterans' preference, and so forth, a plan that would require detailed record-keeping and paper work by all Federal agencies.

This plan, too, has run into strenuous agency opposition. Many agency officials are opposed to what they call red tape in the making of lay-offs of temporaries. In brief, they want the right to fire temporaries at their own discretion without complying with any Civil Service formula.

NPA: Civil Service has given Commerce's new National Production authority to hire Grade 5 and 7 secretaries from industry without prior Civil Service clearance. The authority permits people from industry, who join NPA, to bring their own secretaries with them.

NPA has set up a panel of officials to make selections of junior economists at Grade 5. A second committee will select industrial specialist trainees. Most of the young people chosen will be assigned to NPA's industry operations bureau.

JOBS: The Census Bureau is accepting applications for card punch operator trainee, Grade 2, $2450 to start. No experience or Civil Service status is necessary. Applications must be females, from 18 to 62. Apply in person at Guam Hall, 24th st. and Oklahoma ave. ne. Written tests will be given on a first come first served basis.

Lions Club Men Turn Painters To Refurbish Children's Home

The Washington Post

SPRUCING UP—Two members of the East Gate Lions Club are shown painting the exterior of the Country Home for Convalescent Children at 18th st. and Bunker Hill rd. ne. On the ladder at left is Carl Carlson, chairman of the committee, and to the right is Arthur Jarrett. Children at the home watch the proceedings

A passel of Lions grabbed brushes Saturday and transformed the Country Home for Convalescent Children from a paint-peeling mass of bricks into a thing of beauty.

The miracle was hardly less for the fact the Lions were of the fraternal variety What with the white paint, the overalled bankers, insurance men and such were looking a bit ghostly by day's end. Still, the walls bore considerably more paint than their faces.

"We've always taken a special interest in the home," said J. F. Crowell, president of the East Gate Lions Club, which did the job. "This is an institution in our area. We give the kids a party at Christmas, things like that. But quite a while now we've been wanting to dress the place itself up."

The Home at Eighteenth st. and Bunker Hill rd. ne. is supported by the Community Chest. But there are not enough funds, said Crowell, to do much "fixing up."

Not only is the Lions Club seeing to the outside painting. It's also paying for redecorating the inside.

Even the cries of the children seemed softer yesterday in their more pleasant surroundings and several of them looked curiously out the windows to see Lions at work.

This is the second Saturday on the job, which will require a little more work.

Club members wielding paint brushes yesterday included Crowell, Carl Carlson, chairman of the club's boys and girls aid committee, which set up the project; Fred Strobel, Arthur Jarrett, Earl Wilhelm, Wiley Beale, Julian Cardin, Lyle Worth and W. C. Breckinridge.

Breckinridge is a painting contractor and furnished the equipment and know-how. Right able crew of Lion painters he had working for him, too.

Five Injured In Car Hit By Trolley

2 Women in Auto Reported to Be in Serious Condition At Hospital Here

Five persons were injured—two of them seriously—when their automobile was rammed by a southbound streetcar at 1:30 p. m. yesterday at 7th and L sts. nw.

In serious condition at Freedmen's Hospital are Mrs. Rose Ramey, 36, of Orange, N. J., undetermined fractures, and Florence Reed, 46, of 1436 W st. nw., concussion.

Taken to Emergency Hospital were Mrs. Ramey's husband, Arrie, 36, in good condition, with a possible fracture of the right leg; Mrs. Marguerite Reed, 65, also of 1436 W st., fair condition, with possible fractures of the ribs and right thigh, and Glenn H. Jarrell, 32, of Newark, N. J., driver of the car, in good condition, with possible fractures of the ribs and right elbow.

A passerby—unidentified by police—removed Jarrell from the demolished car. The other four victims were trapped inside the auto until Rescue Squad No. 1 extricated them.

Police said Jarrell was driving north on 7th st. behind a northbound streetcar. At the intersection, they reported, he attempted to make a left turn and was struck by the southbound trolley. The southbound streetcar was driven by Omar D. Hague, 21, of 3945 4th st. se.

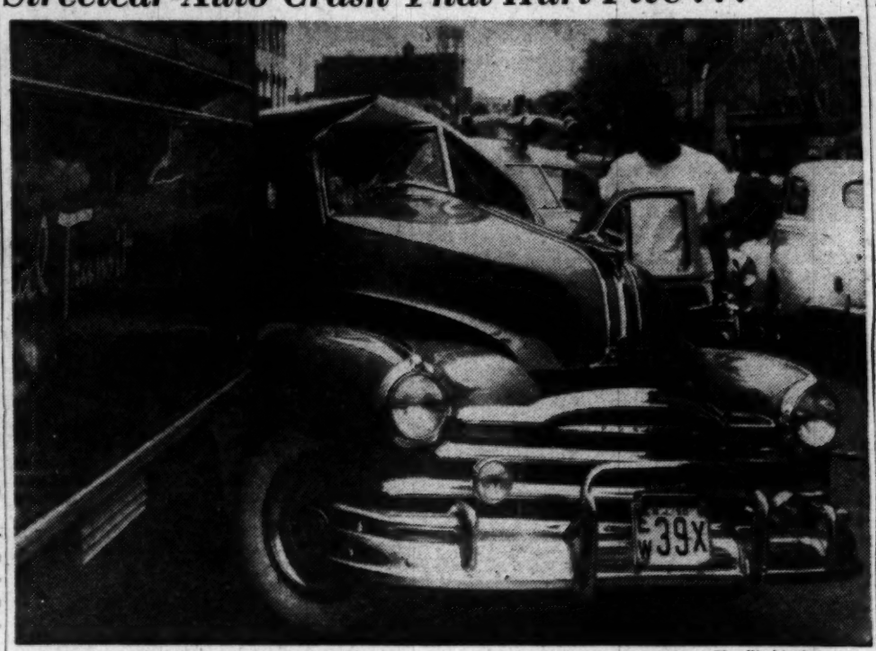
Twelve streetcars were backed up behind the trolley for about a half-hour. Automobile traffic was not seriously affected.

Police last night said they had not brought charges.

Mrs. Ester Watson, 25, and Miss Alberta Drake, 22, both of 1252 3d st. nw., were in fair condition yesterday at Casualty Hospital. Mrs. Watson was detained with a compound fracture of the left leg and heads cuts. Miss Drake suffered a possible fracture of the right leg.

Maryland State police said the two women were passengers in a car driven by Frank Neal, 28, of 1335 1st st. sw., which was in an accident occurring shortly before midnight Saturday on Route 223, about a half mile east of Piscataway, Md.

Streetcar-Auto Crash That Hurt Five . . .



The Washington Post

FOUR TRAPPED IN AUTO—Five persons were injured—two seriously—yesterday afternoon when a southbound streetcar running on 7th st. nw. collided with a northbound automobile turning on L st. Four of the victims were trapped in the auto until members of Rescue Squad No. 1 cut away the wreckage to free them

Bandit Robs 2 Hotels of $175; Foiled At Hamilton

Clerks Barricade Selves and Gunman Departs; Muddy Track Is Clew

A bandit with muddy shoes tracked through the nearly deserted lobbies of three downtown hotels early yesterday, holding up two of them for $175.

At the third hotel—the Hamilton, 14th and K sts. nw.—he lost his nerve when two employes barricaded themselves in an office.

Got $50 at Martinique

At 3:40 a. m., a small-caliber gun in hand, he walked into the Martinique Hotel and confronted a night clerk, William P. Duff, 67, of 3447 Oakwood ter. nw.

A few minutes after the gunman had left with $50, a party of eight walked into the hotel.

Three of them were identified as Harvey L. Doss and Mr. and Mrs. John Beaseley, of Martinsville, W. Va.

Hearing Duff's story, they went to 16th st. and, they told police, saw the bandit enter a cab at Scott Circle. In their car they followed the taxi to 15th and U sts. nw.

There they asked a second cab to tail the first one.

Seek Taxi Drivers

At 5:15 a. m., the bandit confronted night clerk Myron H. McMath, 47, of 905 Roanoke ave., Takoma Park, at the Parkside Hotel.

McMath, however, scampered over the front desk and hid behind a pillar.

"If you make another move," said the bandit, "I'll kill you."

McMath and the bandit then chased each other around the pillar.

"If you come out," the bandit wheedled, "I won't hurt you."

Said McGrath: "I won't—while you have that gun."

"All right," the bandit replied, "I'll point it away from you."

McGrath came out and handed the thug $125.

At 5:20 a. m.—five minutes after the Parkside holdup—the bandit entered the Hamilton Hotel.

"Somebody's going to get killed," said the bandit.

Run Into Back Office

Cashier Theodore Reed, 23, of 1841 Columbia rd. nw., and Room Clerk Allen Pattee, 24, of 1133 13th st. nw., had been standing behind the front desk.

They ran into a back office and barricaded themselves against the door. The holdupman left without taking anything.

Police said the bandit's shoes were very muddy. They asked shoeshine boys and shoe repairmen to be on the lookout for them.

From descriptions, police said the bandit was between 30 and 35 years old, weighs 150 to 160 pounds, has dark brown hair, a high forehead and a prominent nose.

He was wearing a tan or light brown suit and the muddy reddish-brown shoes, buckled with one strap.

The two men at the Hamilton Hotel said he was wearing a gray-checked overcoat when he entered the lobby.

Cartoons Urge Fairfax Vote For Manager

Good Government Group Distributing 8000 Copies of Flier

A cartoon publicity sheet in support of the County Manager form of government in Fairfax County is being distributed to about 12,000 registered voters, the Committee for Good Government said yesterday.

Prepared under the direction of the publicity committee of the Fairfax County Committee for Good Government, Omer Hirst, chairman of the committee, says it "tells a lot in a few words."

About 20 ink-sketched characters representing a mixed group—businessmen, teachers, housewives, etc.—are shown grouped about the Fairfax County courthouse. Two characters quip:

"Will I lose my job when a county manager comes in?" A woman answers: "No, records show that managers do not fire present employes — except loafers."

In another scene a harried mother with two children squabbling in front of a "Vote-County-Manager" truck is "frantic about schools."

Businessmen in cars and on the corners discuss sanitary, financial and supervisory aspects of the present administration vs. the county manager and county executive forms.

A farmer worries in one corner of the 8x10 sheet about paying for suburban sewers and things "that we farmers don't need." His companion explains that's why he's "voting county manager. He'll really set up a sanitary district, and the people who want those things pay for them."

Poison Hunted

Police Check Whisky in Man's Death

Washington police were checking the remains of a pint of whisky to see if it contained a poisonous substance which may have caused the death of a 47-year-old Seat Pleasant (Md.) man yesterday.

Anderson Wyatt, 47, of 319 69th pl., Seat Pleasant, first complained of feeling ill on the evening of October 13, shortly after taking a few drinks from a pint he had bought on his way home from work.

Over the telephone that evening, he told his wife, Edith, who was out for the evening that his throat hurt, possibly from a gas leak in the refrigerator which he was defrosting. Later he discounted the possibility of a gas leak.

The next day Wyatt was so ill, he had to leave his job as a weather-stripper and come home. A little relieved that evening, a Saturday, he attended a birthday party for his niece. But on Sunday he awoke with a swollen stomach.

A physician called by Mrs. Wyatt noticed a greasy substance in the pint bottle, which still contained some of the liquor, she said. Wyatt was taken to Prince Georges County General Hospital, and on Tuesday of last week was transferred to Georgetown Hospital to be treated with an artificial kidney. He died at 4 a. m. yesterday.

Washington police said they had sent the bottle and its contents to the Food and Drug Division of the Agriculture Department for analysis.

However, Dr. James I. Boyd, a Prince Georges County medical examiner, said he understood that the analysis of the whisky showed traces of carbon tetrachloride, a poisonous cleaning solution, in its contents.

Deputy District Coroner Dr. Richard M. Rosenberg performed an autopsy yesterday, but said he could not determine the cause of death until chemical tests have been completed.

Mrs. Wyatt told police her husband had been suffering from cirrhosis of the liver.

Strike Ends, Slowe Pupils Will Return

Forty First Graders To Be Kept Home as Protest on Part Time

All Slowe elementary school pupils except the 40 first graders will return to classes today, ending a one-day strike in protest against establishment of part-time classes for the first graders.

Parents of the first graders yesterday decided to keep their children home when they learned that the new part-time schedule which becomes effective today would let the children out of school at 4:30 p. m.

After a meeting with the parents, the executive committee of the Slowe Parent-Teacher Association sent a letter to the District Board of Education stating that traffic hazards are "greatest" at 4:30 p. m., and especially in the vicinity of the school at 14th and Jackson sts. ne., and that no patrol boys or policemen would be around to guide the children across streets.

Parents requested a meeting with School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning to discuss the problem.

In addition, the P-TA letter stated the part-time set-up was "academically unsound and an unfair and unjust solution" because:

The children will go to school at a time of day when they are fatigued; the first grade "is one of fundamental importance" and even a few months on part-time may be detrimental; and the children will get 3½ hours of instruction instead of the minimum of five required by law.

School officials have said that the children will be put back on full time February 1, after six rooms are added to the five-room school. But the P-TA said that, because of past experiences, it had no assurance that part-time classes will end on schedule. Construction of the new room has not been started yet.

Driver Faces Five Charges After Chase

A 24-year-old man was charged with five traffic violations yesterday after an early morning chase which ended when the automobile he was driving crashed into a fence in the 600 block of Q st. nw.

During the chase police said they fired several warning shots.

Fifteen minutes later police arrested William Mitchell, 24, of 762 Morton st. nw. He was charged with going the wrong way on a one-way street, not having a District driving permit, speeding, colliding and driving without lights.

He forfeited $80 collateral.

Pvt. Robert R. Gould and Pvt. Ferd D. Hoell of the Second Precinct, said they saw the auto going without lights about 5 a. m. at 5th and N sts. nw. They said they shouted to the driver to put his lights on.

Instead, they claimed, the car sped away. The policemen chased him in a scout car.

At times, the policemen said, the two cars sped along at 60 miles an hour.

Errors Denied In Arlington Police Report

The chairman of the committee which investigated the Arlington Police Department yesterday denied his group made "misstatements" in its report or exceeded the scope of authority delegated to it by the county board.

Chairman E. J. Steger, 6722 N. Washington blvd., said he hadn't seen the commentary by County Manager A. T. Lundberg "vigorously" denouncing the committee for charges he termed "untrue and defamatory in character."

However, Steger said yesterday, "I believe everything said in the report can be backed up by testimony."

Asked whether the report was intended to "defame" Lundberg in any way, Stegar replied:

"Certainly not. He's a good friend of mine."

The charge of exceeding the intended scope of the three-man committee's inquiry grew out of a suggestion by the police commission that the county board "investigate" construction of a new courthouse annex on which the committee charged the original bid had jumped from $374,000 to $620,000.

The language of the committee's report on this subject, Lundberg declared, "is such that it impugns the integrity of the county manager."

Steger maintained the committee did have authority to make such a recommendation and added that the county board's instructions to the committee contained the words:

"However, the committee's inquiry is not limited to specific charges and allegations set forth in this paper. The committee or any member thereof shall feel free to make such other inquiries deemed necessary and report to the board thereon."

"Even if we were not entitled to make the recommendation as a committee," Steger said, "we certainly were as citizens."

Lundberg has stated that the first estimate of the courthouse wing cost was $430,340. Later additions, including a jail costing $164,000, boosted the estimate to $620,000, he explained, adding that all "major revisions" were made with the full knowledge of the county board.

1000 Entries to Join In Cagebird Show

Pink canaries, parakeets and talking wild birds will be among the 1000 entries at a cagebird show in the Annapolis Hotel, 11th and H sts. nw., Friday through Sunday, from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m.

The Cagebird Society of Washington, D. C. will sponsor the show for the benefit of the Children's Hospital polio ward.

Assaults in July

D. C. Survey Pinpoints Crime Habits

For aggravated assaults, Washington criminal preference runs to a Saturday night in July between 11 and midnight.

Robbers prefer a December Saturday, two hours earlier in the evening.

Automobile thieves come out of hiding most often late in the afternoon of an April weekend.

Rapists are equally active on Sundays and Tuesdays, during October and May, in the dead of night. But attempted rapes occur most often at 10 and 11 p. m., on a Tuesday night in September.

Contained in Survey

These composite insights into the habits of our criminals are contained in the first detailed statistical survey ever made public by the Metropolitan Police Department.

The survey is the work of Lieut. Earl Hartman, produced and printed by his department, covering the 12 months ended June 30, 1950.

The survey even catalogued the victims of crimes.

More persons were murdered between the ages of 30 and 34 than any other age group in Washington. More women were raped between 25 and 29, but victims of attempted rape were most often between 30 and 34.

Older People Robbery Victims

Men and women over 50 were most often victimized by robbers and purse snatchers.

The typical drunk driver was a male between 30 and 34.

Contrary to masculine theory, bad male drivers outnumbered bad female drivers—42,483 to 1780.

There were 2688 improper turns made during the fiscal year in the District and 2578 of them were committed by men.

Poorer in Parking

In parking violations, the weaker sex had a poorer record, but still committed only 11,718 violations as compared with the 99,685 committed by males.

More autoists were arrested on Wednesday than on any other day, and more in March than any other month.

More aggravated assaults were committed in Washington on the basis of population than in any other city in the country during the fiscal year, the survey showed.

The weapon most often used was the knife. Most of the knives were of the so-called switchblade variety, with blades shooting open with the flick of a button on the handle, according to police.

United States Attorney George Morris Fay and Supt. of Police Robert J. Barrett have both asked for legislative help in dealing with these knives.

Four Israeli Officials To Be Feted Here

Four officials of the Israeli government will be guests of honor at a banquet of the National Planning Conference for Israel and Jewish Rehabilitation, Saturday at the National Guard Armory.

The conference will open in the Statler Hotel Friday and continue through Sunday night. The sessions will be devoted to the formulation of a three-year financial assistance program for Israel.

The four officials will be Foreign Minister Moshe Sharett, Finance Minister Eliezer Kaplan, Labor Minister Golda Myerson, and Abba Eban, Israeli Ambassador to the United States.

Others scheduled to address the three-day conference are Secretary of the Treasury John Snyder; Leon Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers; Berl Locker, chairman of the Jerusalem section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, and Levi Eshkol, treasurer of the Jewish Agency.

Delegates to the conference have been named by 42 American organizations connected with Jewry. A. S. Kay of Washington has been named chairman of the Washington arrangements committee for the banquet.

Sale of Antiques To Aid Children At Health School

An exhibition and sale of antiques will start today at 11 a.m. in the Continental Ball Room of the Wardman Park Hotel.

It is sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Health School, an institution for handicapped children conducted by the District Government at 13th and Allison sts. nw. Proceeds will be used to purchase equipment and appliances for the children.

The exhibition and sale of antiques, which will include furniture, china, glassware and dolls, will continue to Thursday night at 11 o'clock.

P-TA Group Plans Teas

The Keene-Rudolph Parent-Teacher Association will hold its annual tea Tuesday at 2 p.m. for the parents and teachers at the Rudolph school, and on Wednesday at 2 p.m. for the teachers and parents at Keene school.

U. N. Called Milestone in Road To Peace

The United Nations was pictured yesterday as a milestone on the road toward achievement of God's purpose, a world of peace.

Speaking on the fifth anniversary of the founding of the United Nations, the Rev. Russell C. Stroup said, "We are not dedicating a structure today, but laying the cornerstone of a building yet to be constructed."

The pastor of the Georgetown Presbyterian Church told his congregation that "the encouraging thing is that so much has been accomplished despite the difficulties we have faced, and the war that has not yet ended.

"If the U. N. is going to be a success, it must be more than a police force," the minister warned. "Its action must not only be punitive but also be creative. It will fail if it does not advance the legitimate aspirations of men all over the world seeking freedom, not simply by preventing aggression but also by building up economic structures so people may have a firm foundation upon which to live."

Correction

The Washington Post, in Sunday's edition, reversed the indentifications on photos of Thomas N. Roane, owner of Roane's Pharmacy, who died Friday night of a

Archbishop Presents Paladin Cross to 49

Ten religious and 39 high school students were presented with Paladin Cross yesterday by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, for distinguished service to the Catholic mission cause.

Presentations were made at a Sunday vesper service at St. Matthew's Cathedral, 1725 Rhode Island ave. nw. The archbishop praised the recipients as an inspiration to the 175,000 Catholics in the Archdiocese of Washington in providing spiritual and material aid to Catholic missionaries in all parts of the world.

The Paladin Cross, dating from the time of the Crusades in the eleventh Century, is the traditional award for outstanding service in the Catholic's Mission Crusade. Two other students received the Order of St. Louis the Crusader.

Col. Piepkorn Heads Army Chaplain Unit

Col. Piepkorn

Lieut. Col. Arthur C. Piepkorn, former commandant of the Army and Air Force Chaplain School, Carlisle Barracks, has been named president of the Department of the Army Chaplain Board.

A native of Milwaukee, he succeeds Col. Peter C. Schroeder, who is now pastor of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, Elberton, Ga. He has been assigned to Fort Meade.

Commissioned in the Chaplain Reserve in 1936, Chaplain Piepkorn has been on active duty since 1940, and was commissioned in the regular Army in 1942. He graduated from Concordia College in Milwaukee and holds a B.A. and B.D. from Concordia Theological Seminary in St. Louis, and a Ph.D. from the University of Chicago.

Church Marks 25th Year With Special Mass

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Catholic Church of the Epiphany was observed by more than 500 persons yesterday morning at the church, In a sermon at the solemn 2712 Dunbarton ave. nw.

In a sermon at the solemn pontifical mass, the Rev. Patrick J. Veale, S. S. J., of St. Joseph's Seminary, reviewed the parish's history since it was founded for Negro Catholics in 1925, by the Right Rev. Msgr. Lawrence H. Schaefer, S. S. J., now of Tontiville, Ark.

Monsignor Schaefer and another former pastor, the Rev. Vincent J. Assing, S. S. J., were guests of honor at the celebration.

The mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington.

Alto Vista Parish Holds First Masses

The first masses in the new parish of St. Jane Frances de Chantal, Alta Vista, Montgomery County, were said yesterday in the Chapel of the Visitation Monastery, 9001 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda.

The new parish will hold its services there until a new church can be built, the Rev. Philip A. Caulfield, pastor, said.

Everybody Gets a Chance to Chat When Betty and Bob Sherrod Give a Party

By Marie McNair

THERE SHOULD BE more parties in Washington such as Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sherrod gave yesterday afternoon. With Gen. Clifton Cates, Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Cates as guests of honor, there were just enough guests to comfortably fill the house, and thus give opportunity for conversation.

Mrs. Cates, whom I'd met a week ago shopping in vain for a "little black dress," had settled on a midnight blue satin for the party yesterday. Betty Sherrod, in a deep blue velvet brocaded chiffon frock, wore a brace of purple orchids. Her husband brought them from Honolulu—a gift from Mrs. Arthur Radford, wife of the Pacific's Naval Commander. Bob Sherrod, who's a Time correspondent, made the Wake Island trip with President Truman.

It being a leisurely Sunday afternoon party, there was time and opportunity to thumb through "Life's Picture History of World War II," for which Bob Sherrod had spent many months writing the text. And it was nice to meet the editor of the book, Arthur Tourellot, and Mrs. Tourellot.

In the pine panelled library there's a portrait of Mr. Sherrod in a war correspondent's uniform, by Joseph Cummings Chase. It's the gift of a grieving mother, whose son had lost his life at Saipan, and to whom Mr. Sherrod was able to give some degree of comfort.

Former Undersecretary of the Navy, John L. Sullivan, came early; his successor, Dan Kimball, and Mrs. Kimball came later. I met Mrs. Clayton Jerome, whose husband, Brigadier General Jerome, is Assistant Commandant for Air of the Marine Corps; and Brig. Gen. John McQueen, also of the Marines.

Miss Frieda Hennock, only woman member of the Federal Communications Commission, was there telling why she voted against color TV.

John, good looking 12-year-old of the family, was at the door to greet the guests. Mrs. Walter Wyatt had been asked to assist in the dining room where a huge Smithfield ham was the piece de resistance, and potato salad, hot biscuits and deviled eggs, the accompaniments.

Col. J. E. Munn chatted with Mrs. Robert Guggenheim. She and Colonel Guggenheim went on to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Redikers' for cocktails and then to dine with Mrs. Marcella duPont.

Mrs. Morris Cafritz, with sweeping black paradise on her hat, was there; and from newspaper row were Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buel, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Foote and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Wright.

MRS. FRANK S. PHILLIPS and her daughter, Miss Arcadia Phillips who is attending Westhampton College, entertained at luncheon on Saturday at the Little Tea House, in honor of Miss Elizabeth Newland Jones whose engagement to Andrew Hollister Kirkpatrick was recently announced. Among the 24 guests were Mrs. Edward K. Jones, Mrs. William Krikpatrick, Mrs. James T. Priddy, jr., Mrs. Lawrence Jones, Mrs. Robert Featherstone and Mrs. Martin West.

ANTIQUE FANCIERS—Bonin' up on their knowledge of antiques are (left to right) Edna Propes, Danielle Pironto and Paul Robertson, students at the Health School. This young trio doesn't want to be caught napping when the Antique Show opens at the Wardman Park Hotel today. After all, the proceeds will benefit them and their school! The show, which continues through Thursday, is open from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

The Toy Box

Santa's Animal Pack Includes Dachshund, Bear and Lion Cub

By Alleis C. Wilson

THE SMELL OF bayberry candles and pine cones is still about two months away, but at least one search for a Santa Claus is on. In an effort to find one, a want ad recently specified that Santa must be fond of children. Very fond.

It only proves that in a few weeks Santa's helpers will be setting up shop all over town. New counters are being added in the toy departments and the early shoppers are finding a fine selection of toys and games.

The stuffed animal kingdom in Washington is swelling. New arrivals include a boxer pup ($6.98), a dachshund ($5.98) and a tumbling bear (wind it and it will turn somersaults—$3.98). All are at The Hecht Co.

Among the most appealing gift selections are the cunning animal hand puppets. They are about the next best thing to a live pet for a child. The animals, designed by Margaret Steiff, are quite realistic. A lion cub looks like he should be in a cage in the Zoo but in the hands of a child he is docile enough to live in your living room. (The Play Center, Inc.—$2.50).

BRIGHTLY PAINTED Mexican chairs in small sizes would make a gay gift under a child's Christmas tree. They are available in two sizes—small for 2-to-4-year-olds and large for the 4-to-6-year-olds. Either will hold the weight of an adult, according to the dealer.

The larger style is actually used as a slipper chair or boudoir chair in its native land. Boys and girls will love having their own chair in the living room. And after the children go to bed, the chairs are fine for the front row for televiewing or home movies. (The Mexican Shop—$3.50 and $4.95.)

An all-metal automobile transport truck with four small cars will make a hit with any boy who sprawls on the living room floor to push his cars around. (Landsburgh's — $4.50). He also will like some of the inexpensive small cars from the ten-cent store. Some of these now come with moving parts. They include a tiny police car with a gun that bangs, a taxi with a meter that moves, a fire chief's car with a bell, and a family car with movable windshield wipers. (Woolworth's—19c).

FOR A MUCH SMALLER child, either boy or girl, a color cone will be one of the first toys he can actually put together himself. A rocking one has a rounded bottom with a brightly painted base and peg. Six graduated wood rings fit easily over the peg. Woodward & Lothrop—$1.).

The stores are full of articles to gladden the heart of the cowboys and cowgirls in the younger set. Cowboy equipment includes complete cowboy outfits, guns, holsters, spurs, leather cuffs, lariats, etc. And most of these come bearing the name of the child's favorite—Gene Autry, Roy Rogers, Hopalong Cassidy, etc.

A Hopalong "Topper" for the hobby horse crowd comes in two sizes. The body is heavy plastic, the legs and base are wood. (The Hecht Co.—$5.98 and $9.98). In the doll world, a plastic Hopalong comes complete even to the black boots, silver gun, leather holster and a plaid tie. (Lansburgh's—$7.95). A cap pistol bearing this same cowboy's name is $1.19 at Woolworth's. Gun and spurs sell for $2.29 at the same store.

IF YOU KNOW a little mother of an infant doll you will be interested in a car seat for the "child." The seats are large enough for a 14- to 16-inch doll and come in plaid or solid pastel colors. These seats will fit over the back of the seat in the family automobile. (The Hecht Co.—$1.).

And now dolls can have diaper service, too. This set has three diapers, soap, powder, oil, extra pins, cotton, a sponge and a diaper container like the ones supplied by the diaper laundries. (The Hecht Co.—$1.98.)

If the infant doll is still taking bottles, a nursing set should be part of the standard equipment. A plastic kettle for sterilizing six bottles, with nipples, funnel, can of milk, measuring spoon, cup, jar for sterile nipples and a brush for cleaning the bottles costs $2. (F. A. O. Schwarz).

Miss Ginesi, John M'K. Boyd Are Married

The marriage of Miss Errisinola Lombard Ginesi, daughter of Mrs. Zuleika Lombard Ginesi, of Riverside, Conn., and Robert L. Ginesi of Washington, to John McKinley Boyd of St. Louis, took place yesterday in the Second Congregational Church in Greenwich, Conn. The bridegroom is the son of Frank Dunham Boyd of Delafield, Wis., and Mrs. Richard Laswell of Petersburg, Va.

The Rev. Daniel Bliss officiated at the ceremony and Mr. Ginesi gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's gown of gold brocade and rose point lace with rose point lace veil, had belonged to her maternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Louis Lombard of Washington and Trebano Castle, Lugano, Switzerland.

Miss Heloise Lombard Ginesi, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and other attendants were Miss Audrey Freiheit of Bronxville, N. Y., and Miss Sally Krams of Riverside, Conn. Thomas McNulty of Delafield, Wis., was best man. Ushers were Richard Laswell of Petersburg, and Louis Lombard of Fillmore, Calif.

The bride is a graduate of Greenwich Academy and Black Mountain College, North Carolina. On her father's side, she is descended from the Barons Tanfani di Mont Alto of Ancona, Italy. Mr. Boyd attended Washington University in St. Louis and Black Mountain College.

He served two years in the Army Air Corps.

Miss Drechsler Becomes Bride

Miss Eudora Drechsler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Drechsler, of Westminster, Md., became the bride of Guy Nageotte, also of Westminster, in a ceremony which took place October 21 at St. Martin's Church in Washington. The Rev. William E. Kelley performed the ceremony.

The bride's sister, Miss Clotilde Drechsler, served as maid of honor. Best man was her brother, John Patrick Drechsler. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Miss Genevieve Wimsatt in Georgetown.

Following their honeymoon in the Poconos, the newlyweds will make their home in Westminster. The bridegroom served with the United States Army for three years during the last war, and is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College.

Two Reds Can Clash Even In Modern Decor; Drapery Colors Should Harmonize

DEAR ANNE:

I need help in deciding upon draperies for living and dining rooms. Both rooms are painted gray with white woodwork and are carpeted in gray. They are both bright and sunny. The dining room furniture is painted gray.

The studio couch is slip-covered in wine, one chair in gray, and there are two hostess chairs in a gray background with bright red flowers and green leaves, and the backs of these chairs are green. I would like to match the red in my chairs for my draperies, but since two of the windows are in back of the studio couch, I'm wondering about it. Shall I use the same material for dining room draperies, since one window can be seen from the living room?

O. A. H., Hyattsville, Md.

I agree with you that the bright red draperies wouldn't be good behind the wine couch. It's possible, of course, that they might harmonize if they are unusual shades. However, I find it difficult to imagine, even in view of the present-day penchant for combining surprising colors. Much better, I think, would be green draperies for the living room. You could still use red in the dining room, making them of the same material and in the same style as the green ones.

DEAR ANNE:

I would like to know how to remove tar (almost a week old) from a woven cotton chair.

Mrs. S. B. G., Greenbelt, Md.

This is a hard stain to remove. First, scrape off as much as possible with a dull knife. Then sponge with a dry cleaning fluid. If the chair is of the cotton webbing type, put absorbent cloth beneath spot and sponge liberally with the fluid. If, on the other hand, it's an upholstered chair made of cotton fabric, use a brushing movement as you sponge, so as not to work the tar into the upholstery

DEAR ANNE:

Can you or your readers tell me how to remove a spot from the headboard of a maple bed? My husband was ill, ran a high temperature, and rested his wet head against the headboard, which took the finish off.

J. N. A., Washington.

It's likely the finish is simply water-spotted, not removed. Get some powdered pumice stone and linseed oil at paint or drug store. Dip soft cloth in oil, then in the powder and rub with the grain of the wood. Finish by wiping with cloth dipped in just the oil.

Joan Learns How To Make A Smile Her Biggest Asset

Second Day of Joan's Beauty Program

By Ann Lawrence

A MODEL-ACTRESS must be able to smile—to show even, white, flashing teeth. Not that she must mimic a grinning Cheshire cat, at all times, but when she's applying for a job, when she's being interviewed, when she's appearing before the public, the genuine smile is her biggest asset.

In that matter, she's no different, of course, from the office worker. A smile—and good teeth to go with it—are all important.

Because Joan's teeth were uneven and crooked she needed real dental work. And because she is determined to make a success of her career, she had her front teeth capped completely.

BUT EVEN WITH HER TEETH as perfect as modern dentistry can make them, there were other rules of oral hygiene to adopt.

At least once a day, Joan will use a mouth wash or a gargle. Cigarettes, heavy rich foods, liquor all can cause an unpleasant breath. A mouth wash, kept in a drawer or carried in a model's hatbox, is a "must" if you would never risk offending.

It's a good thing to rub your teeth and gums with a towel every day in an up and down motion, Joan learned. This gives them a lovely polish and makes the gum surface nicely firm where it meets the teeth.

IF YOUR TEETH, like Joan's are prone to collect stains, use common table salt, at least twice a week, to brush them. If the stains are truly stubborn, powdered pumice, which you can buy at any drugstore, makes a good cleanser and helps you to banish nicotine and food stains. Don't use pumice more often than once a week, however, as you want to polish—not wear away—the enamel of the tooth.

Our Hearts Must Wait

I know your heart is lonely and . . . You know that mine is too. . . . But what is there this side of earth. . . . That you or I can do? . . . I can not walk across the sea. . . . Or overpass the land. . . . To see your loving smile again. . . . And hold your gentle hand. . . . I can not turn the clock around. . . . To bring the hour near. . . . And I have not the magic wand. . . . To make the weather clear. . . . And so we have to save our dreams. . . . While we are still apart. . . . And live on silent messages. . . . That warm the waiting heart. . . . But there will be a morning when . . . The shore will anchor ships. . . . And when your charms will fill my arms. . . . And I shall kiss your lips.

SEAFOOD SUPPER

Shrimp and Green Peas with Mashed Potato
Individual Salads — Hot Crusty Bread
Jellied Fresh Fruit — Beverage

SHRIMP AND GREEN PEAS WITH MASHED POTATO:

Ingredients: 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons all-purpose flour, 1 No. 2 can (1 pound 2 ounces to 1 pound 4 ounces) peas (2¼ to 2½ cups), 1 3-ounce can broiled mushrooms, milk, 1 5-ounce can shrimp, salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 5 medium-size potatoes (cooked, mashed, and seasoned).

Method: Melt butter or margarine in large skillet or saucepan. Add flour, blend and remove from heat. Drain peas, reserving ¼ cup liquid; drain mushroom liquid into cup with pea liquid, add milk to make 1½ cups. Add milk mixture to butter and flour gradually, stirring until smooth each time. Return to heat and, stirring constantly, cook until thickened and bubbly. Add shrimp which have been drained and rinsed in cold water, peas, mushrooms, salt to taste and pepper. Mix and heat gently. Serve over mashed potatoes. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Postlude

Fine Concert Presented By Menuhin

By Paul Hume
Post Reporter

Yehudi Menuhin played a standard recital yesterday in Constitution Hall before an audience of his admirers.

He opened with one of the greatest of all sonatas for violin and piano, that in D Minor by Brahms. From the six unaccompanied sonatas by Bach he played the E Major.

For a concerto, he chose the fourth by Henri Vieuxtemps, in the same bey as the Brahms. His final group was of short works by Nin and Paganini.

It was a program of beautiful tone and much fine playing. The Bach sonata was easy and unforced in sound, full of happy phrasing and genuine understanding. Menuhin played all six of these technical masterpieces twice in two series last spring in Paris. He has known and played them for 20 years, and they show the knowledge and care he has put into them.

Brahms' Sonata was well outlined. Its opening movement gained the urgency it needs as it progressed. It should have had it sooner, but the steady rise in intensity gave it proper stature.

It is too bad that Menuhin prefers a subdued piano part in this work. Brahms wrote it for two equal instruments, but Adolph Baller, Menuhin's noted pianist, was constantly held down in tone, so that often underlying harmonic developments and figurations were lost.

The team played together much more successfully in Vieuxtemps' worn-out concerto. Here the piano has the impossible job of sounding like the missing orchestra.

With his reputation for playing such modern composers as Bartok, and his own great teacher, Enesco, it is a pity that Menuhin does not treat his listeners to at least one sizable composition by someone born within the last hundred years.

United Nations Club Plans Celebration

The board of governors of the United Nations Club, 1701 19th st., has extended an invitation to all of the United Nations organizations in Washington to meet with club members on United Nations Day, Tuesday from 6 to 9 p. m.

VIEWPOINT — By Dave Gerard

"Now wait a minute! I'll admit I was doing 60—but what about these other cars? Why pick on me? You fatheads—!"

"I don't know what he is hollerin' about! We only stopped him to tell him his brake light doesn't work!"

SEVERAL COOPERATIVE housing associations incorporated in Maryland have memberships open to qualified home buyers. Monthly payments as low as $37.50. Under this FHA plan each cooperative member obtains individual title to his home, and has 40 years to pay off the mortgage. Available to non-veterans and veterans alike. A GI who has previously bought a house under VA is still eligible to join a cooperative association. If he wants a larger home or different location, the cooperative association will assist him in disposing of his present VA home. State the number of bedrooms you prefer in Prince Georges County, and the maximum price you are willing to pay. Also give employer's name, weekly earnings, and credit references. Your application will be answered immediately with full information. Address the Secretary, Box 697, Washington Post.

JAMES L. DIXON & CO.
ST. 7200. Evenings, CO. 7381.

The most beautiful setting for a home in this part of the United States. I have a mile and a half frontage of acreage on River & Bradley Rd. overlooking the Congressional Club. This is especially beautiful setting for a home. I advertised it and no buyers came forward, so I am building my own home on it and it's about completed and I expect to move into it in about 10 days.

The officials in Rockville County seat claimed I moved the Mt. Vernon home to the top of this hill, for this setting of this home is very much more beautiful than George Washington's home at Mt. Vernon. When I was a White House milkman, and delivered milk from Bailey's Cross Roads at 5 o'clock in the morning to the White House, I never dreamed that I would ever have a home with a more beautiful setting than the home for the President. The White House lot is level, and you cannot make a beautiful setting for a home on a level lot. This is a beautiful hill on River Road; it was one of the finest works of Almighty when He made this lovey setting. My wife and I go out and look at it every day, and we get a sensation every time we go. We get a thrill. I am going out right now to look at this beautiful setting. We have 44 acres adjoining another beautiful hill; they ought to put the White House on that one. There is a great deal of talk about only using the White House for official business and have a home on another beautiful hill for the President. My setting would be ideal, for the scenery and surroundings are out of this world. The price of this acreage as an entirety is what it cost me 22 years ago, since I owned it, allowing me interest and taxes, is $6500 an acre as an entirety, and that is the best. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Reach me at my home, WO. 0933. Brokers, attention!

Parts Maker Assails FCC Color Ruling

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 (AP).—A leading television parts manufacturer today criticized the Federal Communications Commission's approval of the Columbia Broadcasting System's color method and said "the right kind of color television set simply isn't here yet."

Robert C. Sprague, president of the Radio Television Manufacturer's Association, said "the CBS system is noncompatible" because "television sets cannot get any picture at all from a CBS color broadcast unless the owner has purchased an adapter."

Sprague spoke over the CBS national network in a reply to Columbia's president, Frank Stanton. Last week Stanton advised prospective purchasers to buy "only from manufacturers who will give you positive assurance that there will soon be adapters and converters which will enble you to get color."

Sprague said, the "right kind" of color television was a "compatible color system that would provide satisfactory black and white pictures on existing sets, as today's regular black and white broadcasts, and without any added cost to the present sponsors."

Rail Strike Spreads

SYDNEY, Australia (Monday), Oct. 23 (AP).—A railway strike that began a week ago in Victoria spread today to New South Wales and South Australia, where workers began a 24-hour stoppage at midnight in support of the Victoria strike. Pay for "passive time" (the interval between jobs) and overtime pay is the issue.

Bastian of GOP Voted Honorary Democrat in D.C.

Don't tell Guy Gabrielson, but a Washington Republican was fraternizing with Democrats yesterday. Moreover, he's a Democrat now—unofficially, of course.

Judge Walter M. Bastian, newly appointed District Court judge, went with a friend to the local Democratic Club's luncheon at the Dupont Plaza Hotel and was voted an honorary member.

"I hope this doesn't get around," he said.

And Samba, and Framba

A. Murray's Bound To Teach the Rumba

By John Crosby

ARTHUR MURRAY'S determination to teach everyone the rumba, an incomprehensible ambition, has extended now to television. If you can learn the rumba by television, then the medium's capacity for evil has been infinitely underestimated. "The Arthur Murray Show," a Du Mont (UTTG) operation, 9 p. m. Sundays, will teach you not only the rumba, but the samba, the mamba, the framba and the plamba.

Crosby

I bring up the "Arthur Murray Show" because it is one of the most conspicuous examples of a trend in television toward an amateur spirit. Television is essentially a pro's game and amateurism is something that ought to be rooted out now. Before its tendrils entwine the—you'll never get this metaphor off the ground, Crosby—living branches of the . . . aah, the hell with it. Any how, the amateur spirit should be resisted in television.

MRS. ARTHUR MURRAY is the emcee of the Arthur Murray show. She reminds me strongly of relentless hostesses who insist that I bob apples when I have other things on my mind. Of course, on this particular show, her pitch is not apple-bobbing; it's the samba, or the rumba or whatever. She insists that everyone do these things and, on her show, everyone does.

Mrs. Murray also bursts into dance when the amateur spirit seizes her, which is often, and one night she did the bumps-a-daisy with a professional wrestler and won. (Thirteen rounds to two, according to my score card.) Recently, she scored the news beat of the year. There were two questions, she said, which had been agitating the Nation for years. (1) Is there an Arthur Murray? (2) Can he dance? Well, there is. (She produced him.) And he can. (They did. No, he isn't spectacularly good at it. Just average.)

From time to time, Mrs. Murray and her guests, who sit around at tables applauding someone else's samba, play games. Dancing games, that is. They are the sort of game which you used to play at dancing school, if you were unfortunate enough to go to a dancing school. (What am I saying? The Murrays run a dancing school.)

THEN there's the Magic Step which Mrs. Murray will demonstrate for you. It has 20 variations. It so happens that the Magic Step is the only step I know in dancing and, through diligence, I have acquired 102 variations. The hundred and second variation, a tricky step, is the one where you twirl the girl out of the French windows down to the swimming pool, where you and she can discuss Jackie Robinson's batting average. The Murrays haven't caught up with this refinement yet.

Graduates of the Murray school are put on exhibition at intervals and tell you how much their training did for them and why they went there. One man said he went to Murray's because, in his non-dancing days, he had to sit around night clubs buying drinks for the girls. By dancing, presumably, he kept the girl occupied so they couldn't spend his money.

There are guests, too, some of them pretty high-priced entertainment. All of them, transfixed by the other monkeyshines on this program, leave their talent home in the upper left-hand drawer. Even Bert Lahr, that wonderful man, was appallingly bad on the Murray show.

And If You Don't Dance, Buy a Ticket Anyhow

There's a group in town called "The Golden Rule Club." You may be invited to attend one of their dances some day, so maybe you ought to know a little bit about them.

It's an informal organization, made up of six members (plus husbands and wives). The six are:

John Smith (and wife, Pat) of 2265 13th st. ne. John tends bar at the National Press Club.

Eddie Kogok (single) of 1328 Maryland ave. ne., an accountant.

Mrs. Ruth Herring of 1749 P st. nw., owner of Gene's Beauty Shop.

Mrs. Margaret Daneri (and husband, Charles) of 4620 21st st. ne., housewife.

Mrs. Betty Sullivan (and husband, Daniel A.) of 3416 10th pl. se. She works for the telephone company.

Mrs. Helen Mohler (and husband, John J.) of 28 N. Edison st., Arlington, Va., a bookkeeper and housewife.

A couple of years ago one of the group met an invalid at Emergency Hospital and got the others interested in promoting a dance, to raise money for the girl.

The dance was a big success, and when another member of the group heard about a little boy who had been injured in an auto smashup, he suggested a second dance.

What started as a one-shot undertaking developed into a hard-working club with no officers and no treasury. When they hear about sudden illness striking down a neighbor, or children orphaned by the death of a fighting man who never regained his health after a harrowing experience as a prisoner of war, they go into action. Every penny raised by their dances is used to help the needy.

I just thought you'd like to know about the Golden Rule Club, in case you ever have a chance to buy a ticket for one of their dances. The next one, also organized to help a needy neighbor, will be held on Saturday, November 25, at the I. C. E. Club in Morningside, Md.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Your item about getting out of an auto on the right (curb) side to avoid being hit by moving cars made good sense.

Since then, I have been trying to break myself of the habit of getting out of the left door, acquired during 29 years of driving, but I'm not doing very well at it. And I've counted 25 people who were also taking a needless risk by getting out the wrong side.

But it seems that men like to hop out from behind the wheel to run and open the curb door for their lady passengers, and you're going to have a hard time changing the rules of etiquette.

Minnie L. Goodwin
7650 Allentown rd. se.

Dear Miss Goodwin:

I'm no crusader, and I'm not trying to change a thing. I merely described my own experience in almost striking a man who was carelessly getting out of the left door of his car, and vowed that I, personally, would try to break myself of that habit.

If other folks also think that safety is more important than etiquette, they'll act accordingly. If not, they won't.

Etiquette is nothing more than accepted social usage, and it changes with the times. If you and I exercise our right to adapt yesterday's rules to today's conditions, chances are other people will be doing the same thing (if it makes sense) and pretty soon the "rule" will change.

RKO is screening a new picture at the Motion Picture Association tomorrow night. Washington Post Managing Editor J. R. Wiggins was invited by telegram to attend, and arched an eyebrow when he read: " . . . titled 'The Seven Cuties of Washington.' "

The next day, RKO followed up with another message: "An error was made in the title of the picture to be screened. The correct title is 'The Seven Cities of Washington.' "

"I suspect they'd have drawn a bigger house if they'd have let it stand the first way," murmured Wiggins.

GET THEE BEHIND ME

WTOP'S Joe Wershba tells a wonderful story about the Irishman who gave up drinking. When he became thirsty one day, he asked the bartender for a lemonade, and added as an afterthought:

"If you should put in a spot of brandy unbeknownst to me, that would be all right, too."

YOUNGER GENERATION

One sweet young thing to another, as overheard on a bus: "He's definitely the elderly type. He remembers most of the movies on television from when they were first-run pictures."

Wake Meeting Was Harmonious

By Drew Pearson

SAN FRANCISCO.—It's now possible to piece together a fairly accurate picture of what went on at the mysterious Wake Island conference — except for one part. I have not been able to ascertain what took place during the solid hour when President Truman and General MacArthur were alone together.

Gen. MacArthur

Another part of the picture puzzle is also missing—namely, why did MacArthur decline President Truman's invitation to lunch and rush off to Tokyo without breaking bread with his Commander in Chief? It was because MacArthur requested that he be excused from lunching that the visit broke up earlier than expected.

Aside from these missing points, however, here is pretty much the story of what happened:

The President and his party had expected a tough argument with MacArthur over Formosa and the general policy agreed upon by both the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the State Department—that we cannot afford to risk war with China over Formosa. Expectation of such a blow-up may have been the reason for the President's solemn silence while en route to Wake. He had indicated to his staff that he was prepared to stay all night and longer on Wake, if necessary, in order to bring MacArthur around to his point of view.

First signs were slightly ominous. MacArthur did not go down to meet Gen. Omar Bradley when he arrived half an hour ahead of the Independence, though Bradley, as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is MacArthur's superior.

Kept Truman Waiting

When the President arrived in the Independence, MacArthur rode down the air strip in a jeep, and, walking to the plane with Averell Harriman, stopped on the way to pose for the photographers with the result that the President had to stand for a few minutes inside the plane, by the door, waiting for MacArthur to greet him.

The two were guardedly cordial. In contrast, MacArthur remarked to United States Ambassador to Korea John Muccio: "You did a whale of a job."

There followed the one-hour conference between the President and the general. What method of approach Truman used on MacArthur is not known. What is known is that the President felt strongly that the United States could not afford to risk thousands of expensively trained American soldiers in a war with millions of orientals over Formosa; also, that we must avoid border incidents along the Manchurian and Siberian frontiers at any cost; and finally, that our main hope in China was to make a Tito out of Mao Tse-Tung.

At times the President has been known to get so wound up and engrossed in his subject that he doesn't let the other person put in a word edgewise. He has also been known to get so steamed up that what he says amounts to a bawling-out. Whatever tactics he used with MacArthur, however, the general later gave every appearance of agreement. And afterward the President personally appeared highly pleased.

Talks on Staff Level

After the hour's personal talk, staff discussions followed—in two groups: one the military, the other diplomatic. Ambassador Muccio conferred with the State Department officials who accompanied Truman, while Bradley conferred with MacArthur.

The President at this point indicated that he would let the staffs work out further details and went for a trip around the island.

During the staff talk, MacArthur reported that he expected to clean up the bulk of the Korean fighting by around November 1. He said that he had quit worrying about the Chinese and Russians intervening in Korea, and he was convinced now that they realized it would be foolish to do so.

MacArthur also agreed to the idea of pulling American troops out of Korea as soon as possible, probably after elections in North Korea. He paid tribute to the South Korean army, said they were now rehabilitated, reequipped and competent to defend South Korea.

It was also decided that MacArthur would make an economic survey of Korea, using Army and ECA personnel, in order to report on rebuilding Korea. The report is to be turned in within 30 days and will be sent to the United Nations.

It was also decided that aid would be speeded to the French in Indo-China, though this is to be the arms already promised the French, not any new commitments.

At one point, when President Truman had returned to the staff conference, an important difference of opinion arose regarding Korean President Syngman Rhee. Truman had some rather harsh things to say about Rhee, felt he had been inadequate and that Korea could not be unified with him as president.

But MacArthur defended Rhee and finally won his point, whereas the President wanted to hold elections in both North and South Korea as suggested by the United Nations, MacArthur held out for holding elections only in North Korea. Thus Syngman Rhee would remain in power in South Korea until 1952.

It was finally decided that the United States would maintain this position in talks with the United Nations.
